Dewey Says Democrats Paid Debts Of Roosevelt

Raskob's Assistance On Warm Springs Fund Is Recalled In Hanley Dispute

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, jaunty, and outwardly as cool as a cucumber, went all out today to talk down the impact of the explosive Hanley letter.

He mentioned it repeatedly during State campaign speeches and wound up tonight at Newburgh, N. Y., by charging that the Democrats, as long ago as 1928, had a rich man to underwrite their debts.

Dewey said he could see nothing wrong in Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley's concern when he wrote to a Republican backer following a conference with Dewey last September 5:

"If I will consent to take the nomination to the United States Senate, I am definitely assured of being able to clean up my financial obligations within 90 days . . ."

Democrats have charged this implied a pay-off in which Dewey bought out Hanley to run for Senator and thus leave the path clear for Dewey's renomination.

1928 Race by Roosevelt

Dewey told a radio audience in a State-wide broadcast that the late John J. Raskob underwrote $200,000 in debts for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1928 so the late President could run for Governor of New York.

Raskob died a few days ago and Dewey said "God rest his soul—he was a wonderful citizen."

"I haven't the slightest criticism of that," Dewey continued. "It was in the best tradition. I just wish we had a Raskob in the Republican Party to help out Joe Hanley—unfortunately we don't.

"We're all men who live on our salaries," Dewey said of his own ticket, while labeling his Democratic opponents rich men. "Every member of the Republican ticket has to live on his salary. We have no rich men on the Republican ticket."

Hanley's "Debt of Honor"

Dewey said Hanley labored for years to pay off more than $100,000 in debts—which Hanley has called a debt of honor growing out of a bank failure for which he was in no way responsible.

"I guess all of us has some debts," Dewey went on. "But when a man 24 years in public office still has debts, ladies and gentlemen, you have found an honest politician."

He said Democrats have suggested someone paid off Hanley's debts and added:

"I wish they had but it happens that nobody has."

Dewey said of the Democrats: "Their thinking is in the sewer."

"Joe Hanley is my friend and I love him," the Governor added. "He also is a great public servant."

Then he turned again to the subject of the Brooklyn grand jury investigation of graft paid to crooked police by gamblers.

"Heaven only knows the total value of corrupt money collected by the Democrat bosses of the city," he added.

Study Head Backs County Status Quo

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

The chairman of the Fairfax County Government Study Commission last night told a rally of residents that he favored continuing the present form of government and predicted the voters would follow suit in the referendum November 7.

Walter C. Crain of Centerville District, commission chairman, was among the 19 members of the 21-man commission who signed a report favoring a change to the county executive form of government early last month.

Last night, however, he strongly supported the present board of supervisors and executive secretary plan of operation before a joint meeting of the Belle Haven and New Alexandria Citizens Associations at the Belle Haven Country Culb.

The other speakers, Mrs. Edward Macy and Omer Hirst, were equally firm in support of a change in county government before the 75 residents gathered in the Belle Haven clubhouse. Joseph W. Wyatt, president of the Belle Haven association, presided.

Crain challenged the charges made against the present plan by two speakers supporting other forms of county government.

"We do have a lot of growing aches and pains in Fairfax County" and there is need for "changes

Ban Proposed On Building Of Fun Spots

By The Associated Press

The National Production Authority last night proposed to the construction industry a possible shutdown on the building of amusement places such as race tracks, dance halls and amusement parks.

The proposal was greeted with near-unanimous disapproval by nearly 20 spokesmen for various branches of the building industry, in a heated day-long session with NPA Administrator William H. Harrison.

Harrison notified the group at the outset that he believed "new limitations on construction would be necessary in the near future."

The builders protested that credit controls imposed on real estate dealings last week would so reduce building activity as to make sufficient materials available for defense.

They gave various estimates as to the impact of credit curbs on home construction, but the highest guess was that 600,000 dwellings would be started in 1951 against an estimated 1,300,000 this year. In addition, the industry men noted, controls over the financing of commercial construction—such as stores and office buildings—are still expected.

Administrator Harrison said, according to the account of the closed meeting released tonight by NPA, that future disruption of the industry can be avoided if necessary action is taken promptly. NPA's statement quoted him as saying:

"The dislocation of our economy caused by the armament program can be kept to a minimum by anticipating military needs instead of waiting until sudden and urgent shortages appear.

"Until our capacity to produce (materials) can be expanded substantially, the military and stockpiling needs must necessarily come out of supplies which normally would go into civilian channels."

Harrison's aides told the industry men there is a "growing feeling" that it is unfair to curtail home construction while continuing to permit the building of amusement places.

Peace Plan Voted by U. N. Unit

Veto-Proof Method Gets Overwhelming Approval; Follows Outline by Acheson

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 18 (AP).—A veto-proof plan to stop world aggression—by force if necessary—was overwhelmingly approved in the United Nations Political Committee today.

Delegates agreed that approval of the American-backed plan was the most important step forward the U. N. has taken since its founding five years ago.

Adoption was by a paragraph by paragraph vote which, Committee Chairman Roberto Urdaneta Arbelaez of Colombia said, constituted approval. Only the Soviet bloc opposed the key provisions of the resolution, scheduled to receive formal Committee approval as a whole tomorrow.

The plan, first outlined by Secretary of State Dean Acheson September 20, gives the General Assembly military power to act whenever the Security Council is hamstrung by a Russian veto. It sets up "peace patrols" to rove areas of tension and report on threats of peace. It also gives any seven members of the Security Council power to call the General Assembly into special session on 24-hour notice when the Council fails in its task of maintaining peace and security.

Result of Korean Conflict

U. S. Delegate John Foster Dulles, who led the 10-day fight for adoption of the plan, said it was a result of the lessons learned in the Korean conflict.

American sources said the United States began during the summer to study ways and means of giving the U.N. power to act, despite Russian vetoes, when it saw U.N. action in Korea was possible only because the Soviet Union was then boycotting the Security Council.

This four-point resolution, cosponsored by Britain, France, Canada, Turkey, the Philippines and Uruguay—was the result.

It was sharply attacked by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky as "illegal," "bizzarre" and a bare-faced attempt to violate the provisions of the U.N. charter which gives the Security Council primary responsibility for maintaining world peace.

Soviet Counter-Proposals

He entered counter-proposals calling for renewed Big-Five conferences—including Communist China—to settle world differences, and for establishment of U. N. military forces under exclusive Security Council control.

The United States answered that the resolution was perfectly in keeping with the Charter since it recognized the primacy of the Security Council, and would only go into effect when that body was paralyzed by the veto.

Norway's Arne Sunde emphasized that maintenance of peace was much more important than maintenance of the primacy of the Security Council.

Deputies Open Parley On Defense Force Funds

LONDON, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—The North Atlantic Council of Deputies today began a four-day conference on how to finance and supply the proposed West European defense force without upsetting European recovery.

A British proposal before the deputies suggests that war production in excess of a country's own requirements be transferred, free of charge to other member nations. France advocated a common defense pool, a sort of international defense budget from which the arms drive would be financed.

Damage Nearly $10 Million

Diminishing Hurricane Strikes Jacksonville; 3 Dead, 50 Hurt

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—A diminishing but still dangerous hurricane struck at this Florida city tonight after leaving the rich citrus section and the Miami coast area with nearly ten million dollars damage, three dead and perhaps 50 injured.

Citrus officials estimated that hurricane winds cost growers three million dollars as the big storm threaded its way straight north up the Peninsula. The Miami area suffered nearly 7 million dollars damages.

Power poles were being snapped and plate glass windows blown out here as gusts up to 50 and 60 miles hit an hour before dark. Red Cross officials opened up shelters here and at Jacksonville Beach.

Then suddenly at 9 p. m., after power failures blacked out most of the city, a dead calm settled over the city, indicating that it was in the "eye" of the hurricane.

Police said the hurricane might deliver more punishing blows with its second cycle or backlash.

Daytona Beach on the East Coast, reported gusts up to 80 miles per hour. Deland, west of Daytona Beach, also was getting hurricane force gusts.

Moving northward at about 18 miles per hour, the storm was expected to brush to the east of Jacksonville early tonight.

Weather stations in the storm area reported sustained velocity winds of 60 miles an hour with gusts above hurricane force. North Florida, southeastern Georgia, southern South Carolina and the coastal region to Cape Hatteras, N. C., were advised to take precautions for dangerous gales.

Fringes of the storm lashed the two main sections of a 100 million box orange and grapefruit crop—the Indian River area on the east

U. S. Reassures Pact Partners On French Aid

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United States was ready to assure its North Atlantic Treaty partners yesterday that it had not gone behind their backs in promising massive military help to France.

If any of the treaty allies are worried, the United States will tell them it has not weakened or violated the principle of "one for all and all for one" in North Atlantic defense.

Several embassies of the treaty nations have already had such assurances in response to informal inquiries about what was promised to the French, and why.

The joint French-American statement of Tuesday night repeated this pledge when it promised that American help would be parcelled out fairly among all the treaty partners. The exact words of the official statement were:

"The final amount of American assistance to support the expanded French defense effort will, subject to future provisions of funds by the Congress, be determined on the basis of multilateral discussion within the framework of the North Atlantic

One Dazed Survivor Found

2 Pilots Missing in Mystery Crash of Three Jet Fighters

Three F-86 Sabre jet fighter planes crashed mysteriously, almost simultaneously, yesterday in the Washington area. Two of the planes and their pilots had not been located early last night.

One pilot, Second Lieut. Luther C. Barcus, 22, of Spring Lake, N. J., a member of the 335th Fighter Interception Squadron at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., "walked away" from his wrecked plane, which he crash-landed in a field four miles west of Nokesville at Aden, Va., about 35 airline miles southwest of Washington.

Andrews Air Force officials believe the other two planes may have gone into a small body of water somewhere in the same general area.

They had no official explanation for the mysterious crashes, and indicated none would be forthcoming until their investigators have examined wreckage from all three planes.

The planes were on a routine training flight out of Andrews Field. Officials there said the planes left the base at 11:10 a. m. They were to fly to Patuxent and return to the base, an hours' flight in all.

Lieut. Joe Kent, public relations officer at Andrews, said the planes were "just about on time" on their return flight when the crashes occurred. Actual time of the crash of the missing planes is not known. Air Force officials place Barcus' crash at 12:30 p. m.

LIEUT. LUTHER C. BARCUS
. . . crashes in jet plane

Lieutenant Barcus was taken to the Marine Hospital at Quantico after his plane crashed on a farm owned by C. B. Bear. On the way to the hospital, he said he had "watched his buddies go down" into a small body of water. He said it looked more like an inlet than the Potomac River.

Lieutenant Barcus said all three planes "hit water." He said he pulled his plane out.

Lieutenant Kent said this explanation was "fantastic" and must be attributed to Barcus's shocked condition. Barcus suffered a broken leg and severe contusions but was in good condition in the Quantico base hospital last night.

Kent said Barcus radioed him before his plane crashed and said the other two planes had "spun" into the Potomac.

Coast Guard Gets Anti-Red Defense Order

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday gave the Coast Guard sweeping powers to protect American ports and ships against sabotage and subversive activities.

The President acted under the legislative authority of Senator Magnussen's (D., Wash.) emergency "Trojan horse" law passed by Congress last summer. His delegation of power to the Coast Guard was made in an executive order, setting forth the regulations to be followed.

Under the regulations, Coast Guard port officers may inspect ships as they see fit, deny ships, cargo or persons access to the ports, and refuse to permit "persons, articles or things" on ships or even on waterfront facilities.

If the port officer believes that the presence of any person or thing is inimical to the security of a vessel or to the port facilities, he can ban it from boarding the vessel or entering the port and docks.

Similarly, he can search and inspect any vessel, place guards on it, and remove from it any passengers or crew or cargo whose presence is considered inimical.

Finally, he can take control or possession of any vessel within the territorial waters of the United States, if he considers that action necessary for the safety of the vessel or the port.

The commandant of the Coast Guard may and from the wording of the regulations presumably will—issue special documents to ships' officers and crews and to shipside and port employes, without which they cannot be employed or be given access to vessels and waterfront areas.

These credentials may be withheld from persons whose "character and habits of life . . . are such as to authorize the belief that their presence on board a vessel or within a waterfront facility would be inimical to the security of the United States."

Fierce Red Resistance Fails to Save Pyongyang

Enemy Officials And Most of Troops Fleeing Northward; New Stand Possible

TOKYO (Thursday), Oct. 19 (AP).—United States First Cavalry troops—first into Manila, first into Tokyo—fought their way today into the deserted Red Korean capital of Pyongyang, a field dispatch reported.

This would make a 13-mile final advance against fiercely resisting Reds seeking to protect the flight of Premier Kim Il Sung's government and army northward.

U. S. Eighth Army headquarters at Seoul received word at noon (10 p. m. EST Wednesday) that elements of two regiments had battled into the ancient city.

The First Cavalry ran into the Red rear guard opposition yesterday while engaged in a race with the South Korean First Division for the honor of being the first into Pyongyang.

Striking out this morning from the town of Hukkyo, the troopers powered their way through Chunghwa, 10 miles out, and then drove on into the city, the field dispatch said.

Support Is Rushed Up

Strong armored reinforcements were rushed up to support the advance.

Airmen returning to Eighth Army headquarters from close support missions said the American troops entered the city at 11 a. m.

They said the first men in were of the First Cavalry's Eighth regiment.

These troops crossed a creek at the southern edge of the capital and fought their way in, the pilots reported.

They ran into heavy artillery and mortar fire as they reached the city limits.

Maj. Thomas Plourde, of Auburn, Me., a ground liaison officer, quoted Capt. Robert Terry of Corsicana, Tex., as saying:

"They are in. They won the race to be first into Pyongyang."

Captured Pyongyang civilians told a South Korean army spokesman that Premier Kim Il Sung's Red government had fled to Huichon, 80 miles north of Pyongyang. They said the Red army had moved military headquarters 10 miles north of the capital to Sunchon.

Before word came that cavalrymen had entered the capital, the advance had been reported stalled by Red resistance 8 miles south of that objective. At that time an Eighth Army spokesman had said "we will launch a new attack as soon as we can spread out and hit the enemy positions."

He added, "we have overwhelming force at our command and, as soon as we can get set, nothing can stop us."

The Eighth Army spokesman said the nearest U. N. force to Pyongyang was the South Korean First Division 8 miles southeast.

South Korea's Pusan radio had said, without confirmation, that the Republic's forces entered Pyongyang Wednesday.

But AP correspondents who later flew over Pyongyang made no mention in dispatches of friendly troops being sighted inside its blackened, bombed limits. They described the city as desolate and nearly deserted.

The Korean Information Press in Tokyo said the Pusan radio reported at 9 p. m. Wednesday (7 a. m. Wednesday EST) that troops of the South Korean First Division entered the city after capturing the airfield near Pyongyang.

A dispatch sent by AP Correspondent O. H. P. King 2 hours and 15 minutes later, after a flight over the Communist capital, made

'Angel' Who Saved 94 Children Has Son of Own—A U. S. Citizen

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Once more Mrs. Luba Frederick—"the Angel of Belsen," if that title better identifies her—has a child in her care.

And, holding this child to her, she wants to tell the whole world of her gratitude.

She would like, she said yesterday, to thank everybody—her doctors . . . everybody. It is almost as if she would like to thank the child itself for being born to her.

"I cradle him in my arms and I want to tell him to be glad. There is so much . . . to tell him that. Do you understand?"

When British troops at the end of the war reached the concentration camp called Belsen, they found that somehow or other Luba Tryszynska had kept 94 children alive.

Her husband had been killed; her child of 4 had been killed, but by some means she had kept those 94 children from being slaughtered. It was very nearly a miracle.

Then Luba Tryszynska took 64 children to Holland. Queen Wilhelmina decorated her.

Someone gave her the title "Angel of Belsen." The name was repeated with gratitude.

While taking some children to Sweden, Luba Tryszynska met a goldsmith named Sol Frederich, a concentration camp refugee. They were married.

"You know my story," she said yesterday.

The Frederichs came to Washington in 1947. They found an apartment at 2535 13th st. nw. Frederich took a job with a jeweler. The "Angel of Belsen" was nearing 30.

"When I first came, the first months, there was excitement—new clothes, the newspapers. Then I looked around and saw all the things a child could have here. I walked and saw this everywhere.

"But I had no child, so I felt empty and poor."

Not long after the changes began, the Frederichs settled down. They replaced "h" with "k" at the end of their name—American-spelling.

Then Frederick became ill. His wife, trained in Germany, worked as a practical nurse. She continued her training.

Frederick became well, but his wife fell ill. She could not have a child, she was told.

"So I felt poor. After all," she said, "when you have had a child, when you have had the care of many children, how can you feel?"

Also, the past remained painful.

"Almost every other night I dream of it yet. The same dream: the children, the fighting, the killing."

But then Luba Frederick found she was with child.

"And I waited for the day the child would be born."

At Sibley Hospital last Sunday, at 11:45 a. m., the child was delivered: Abraham (named for her father) Isaac (named for Frederick's father) Frederick—8 pounds, blue eyes and red hair, an American citizen.

"We want now to save up! We want to take out policies! We want him to go to college," said Luba Frederick, "to have all the things we could not!

"I want to say—oh, how can I express it?—"that I am so happy again. Tell everybody."

19th Child Starts Hunt for House

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Mrs. Walter E. Roberts, 40, gave birth to her nineteenth child today.

The new addition to the Roberts family was a girl. She has nine sisters and eight brothers. One child died in infancy.

The father, a machinist, said the new arrival further aggravates his housing problem. The family has a five-room home at nearby Keedysville.

"This will make things rather crowded," Robert said. "I'd like to have something about 10 rooms.

Russia Wins Round Against Lie

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 18 (NYHT).—Russia won the first round today in its renewed campaign to oust Trygve Lie as Secretary General of the United Nations and replace him with an Indian or a Latin American.

This initial victory was achieved when the Security Council, meeting in closed session at Russia's request, heard India propose a new formula to reopen the whole issue of the Secretary General's office, with every Security Council member submitting names of new candidates.

Russia, China Won't Interfere, MacArthur Tells Truman

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Gen. Douglas MacArthur assured President Truman at their Wake Island conference that he did not believe Russia or Red China would intervene in Korea, it was disclosed here yesterday.

The same high official source which revealed this result of the historic parley also expressed the belief that Mr. Truman convinced MacArthur that his policy of neutrality in Formosa was the right one. At any rate, it was revealed, the two expressed agreement on Formosa after their hour-long private talk and did not bring up the subject in the general conference which followed.

Thus the brief man-to-man talk at Wake appeared to have ironed out whatever differences there might have been between the President and his Far Eastern commander on the question of Formosa. Last month Mr. Truman ordered MacArthur to withdraw a scheduled public statement in which the doctrine was set forth that Formosa was necessary to United States defenses in the Pacific and should be retained as a base. The President made it plain he had no intention of occupying the last stronghold of the Chinese Nationalists and that he had ordered it protected by the United States Navy only as a safey measure during the fighting in Korea.

However, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) criticized the Administration for "leaking" news of the conference via "anonymous" officials.

"We should have the facts from the participants rather than

Man Held in Death Of Wife Tries Again to Kill Self

A 50-year-old Washington carpenter charged with strangling his wife in their apartment at 204 Fifth st. se., has made two more attempts to commit suicide at Gallinger Hospital, police disclosed yesterday.

Evald Nemm attempted to end his own life Tuesday night in the same manner—strangulation—by which he is accused of murdering his 58-year-old wife, Edith, early that morning, police said.

Police were forced to place a "restraining sheet" over Nemm to forestall further suicide attempts.

Nemm suffered a leg fracture when he threw himself in front of an automobile in a previous suicide attempt shortly after his wife was slain.

Mrs. Nemm's body was discovered by police after Nemm directed them to the apartment.

French Yield Fort, Retire on Langson

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—The French announced today that they had abandoned the rock-walled citadel of Dong Dang, throwing open vital road and rail lines into Red China to Communist Indo-China forces.

French troops have been pulled back to Langson, now emptied of civilians the last big fortress on the Chinese border and the gateway to the rice-rich Red River delta of Tonkin province.

Langson is 10 miles south of Dong Dang and only 80 air miles northeast of Hanoi principal city of the north.

Dong Dang, "the back door to China," guarded the northern approaches to Langson and the French decision to give it up, apparently without firing a shot, bodes ill for Langson, French bastion for more than half a century.

The loss of Dong Dang is perhaps the most serious in the Communist campaign, one month old today. Communists now control two highways and one railway, in the process of construction, into China's Kwangsi province.

The cream of the French northern army was cooped within the confines of Langson today under threat of attack at any moment as:

1. French High Commissioner Leon Pignon declared the whole of Tonkin Province to be in "imminent peril" and ordered it placed under a state of alert.

2. Gen. Alphonse Juin, veteran colonial warrior, and French Cabinet Minister Jean Letourneau flew north to Hanoi. They were dispatched by Paris to report on the series of military disasters.

3. Viet Nam Premier Tran Van Huu blasted the French government for its "impossible attitude" during three months of negotiations on the granting of more administrative rights to Viet Nam.

Returned From Parley

The Premier, who returned to Saigon last week from Pau, where the protracted Viet Nam-French negotiations are taking place, said the French wanted control of everything, "down to the tiniest details."

The negotiations were to settle navigation, communication, administration, immigration and other internal Indo-China problems.

In an interview published in the Saigon Journal, the Premier charged that "the time was spent arguing trifles." He accused the French of trying to dominate the conference and promote rivalries among Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

China Reported Massing 200,000 Near Border

HONGKONG, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—A force of 200,000 Chinese Communist troops is massing in southern Kwangsi Province near the Indo-China border, unconfirmed but persistent reports from the mainland said today.

These reports said the troops were being transferred from Hainan Island and from East and Central China. Previous reports have placed other new troop formations in southern Yunnan Province west of Kwangsi, along the Indo-China border.

A report from Luischow, in central Kwangsi province, said the communications ministry has ordered top priority to be given to the construction of the railroad line from Liuchow 250 miles to the Indo-China border. Several miles of the old line still exist. Part was dismantled during the war but the greater part is now being built.

This report said 30,000 coolies and an entire division of railway troops have been assigned to the project, which is under the supervision of Russian engineers. So far, aid to Ho Chi Minh's rebels has been moving by truck and by sea.

Farm Price Act Assailed By Loveland

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Albert P. Loveland, who until last spring was President Truman's No. 2 agricultural adviser, has recently stirred farm politics by a slashing campaign against the current farm price support program.

Loveland, who resigned as Undersecretary of Agriculture to run against Bourke B. Hickenlooper for United States Senator from Iowa, opened his attack on the Agricultural Act of 1949 last week.

Interest in his attack was aroused by the fact that the price support program was written by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.). Anderson formerly was Mr. Truman's Secretary of Agriculture. At present he heads the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. In that job he is charged with helping elect Loveland to the Senate.

Loveland injected the price support issue into the race at a farmer-sponsored meeting at Algona, Iowa.

Food Kept From People

"We can't live forever," he told a startled audience of 300, "with a farm program that keeps meat, milk, dairy and poultry products stored in caves away from the people."

Loveland continued that he quit as Undersecretary of Agriculture to seek election to the Senate because he believes that agriculture must get geared to a business economy.

"Supporting the prices of perishables worked during the war," Loveland went on, "when we were guaranteeing industry it would not lose its shirt in war production.

"We could tell farmers we would stand back of them in producing food as we were standing behind industry producing guns.

"Now we've piled up between 325 and 350 million dollars worth of Government-purchased meat, milk and eggs, taken off the market to sustain the price.

Must Make It Available

"We can live forever with a program like that. We are going to have to make available to the people, in one way or other, this food.

"We are going to have to make it available to the people in regular market channels, and see what happens. If the price breaks below a fair yield to the farm producer, we will have to make up the difference."

Although Loveland doesn't mention the Brannan plan in his attacks upon the price support program, the system of compensatory payments to farmers, he suggests, is in line with Secretary Brannan's proposal to Congress.

So far Hicklenlooper has refrained from making the farm issue a prominent one in his campaign. Instead he has been brushing it off as "a socialistic scheme that will hedge in and regiment this important segment of our free economy."

Republicans, he says, want a "sound and reliable, but nonpolitical farm program to protect agriculture from disastrous collapse."

Labor Defeats Censure Move On Transport

LONDON, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Britain's Labor government won a test of strength tonight and defeated a Conservative attempt to censure the money-losing nationalized transport industry.

A Conservative censure amendment to the motion to accept the annual report of the transport commission was defeated by 296 to 284.

Commons was packed as party whips summoned members for debate, since an unfavorable vote might have unseated Prime Minister Clement Attlee's government. The Conservatives had "deplored" the losses incurred in operating the nationalized railroads and long-distance road transport.

Labor Party leaders had issued a three line whip—their strongest warning—to insure a heavy turnout. One member arrived in a wheel chair. Sir Stafford Cripps, ailing Chancellor of the Exchequer, was rounded up for the voting.

The small Liberal Party group for the first time in months did not vote as a bloc with the Conservatives. Two voted against the government and the rest abstained.

In the debate, Transport Minister Alfred Barnes was greeted with loud cries of "oh" from the Conservative benches when, in referrring to the amendment, he said he was sorry the debate was to be "marred by the political dishonesty" of those speaking for the Tories.

Barnes defended the expression by referring to the action of previous Conservative governments in dealing with similar problems.

The Transport Commission, despite improved efficiency, staff cuts and other money-saving measures, ended 1949 with a deficit of about $62,740,000, after making provision for capital redemption and special items.

Receipts from passengers and freight were about 28 million dollars less than the previous year, with the principal decrease in passenger fares.

D. C. Marine Wounded in Fight That Saw 56-Man Unit Cut to 36

A Washington area Marine lieutenant suffered a slight wound in the left arm in Seoul, where, he wrote, 20 of the 56 men in his platoon were lost in eight hours of fighting.

He is First Lieut. William F. Goggin, 27, whose wife lives at 2513 Newton st. ne. He has returned to duty with the Seventh Marine Regiment.

Lieutenant Goggin, who has served with the Marines eight years, was graduated from Officers Candidate School in 1945 at Quantico, Va., and was stationed at the Marine Barracks here during 1946 and 1947. Later he served aboard an attack transport, the USS Winston, for two years. On August 12 he went to Korea.

Two other Washington men were on yesterday's casualty list. They are Marine Sergt. William J. Conley, 29, whose wife lives at 1433 Ridge pl. ne., wounded; and Army Pvt. Francis A. Smith, who was listed as the son of James B. Smith, 1101 47th st. ne., injured.

Sergeant Conley, who was wounded September 26, was born in Boston where he was educated in Catholic schools. He served in the Marines during World War II for more than four years and fought at Guadalcanal. After a year as a civilian, when the war ended, Sergeant Conley reenlisted, was sent to Guam for two years, then Japan last May, and from there to Korea.

Private Smith's father could not be located at the 47th street address.

Wilson High Alumnus Listed Missing in Korea

First Lieut. James C. Ruddell, jr., son of Col. and Mrs. James C. Ruddell, formerly of 1914 Connecticut ave nw., has been listed as missing in action in Korea and has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism.

Lieut. Ruddell

Ruddell, a 1940 West Point graluate, was cited for ralying small groups into a defense team near Taejon on July 16 when numerically superior Communist forces penetrated the Kum River line and threatened a regimental command post, the United Press reported from Tokyo.

The Eighth Army headquarters citation listed Ruddell as a member of the Nineteenth Regiment of the TwentyFourth Division. Before entering West Point, he attended Woodrow Wilson High School and the Sullivan School.

Col. and Mrs. Ruddell now live in Fort Hamilton, N. Y.

Mencken Still In Critical State

BALTIMORE, Oct. 18 (AP).—H. L. Mencken, near death in Johns Hopkins Hospital, failed to gain during the day.

Dr. Philip E. Wagley, his personal physician, said the famous newspaperman, author and critic's condition at 5 p. m. (EST) was "unimproved, still critical."

The 70-year-old "sage of Baltimore," suffered a violent heart attack last Thursday. Doctors said yesterday there was no chance he would recover.

Dr. Wagley said Mencken aroused to a confused consciousness during part of the day and took some nourishment.

Jap Students Riot, Ban on Group Asked

TOKYO, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Police authorities today demanded the outlawing of the radical National Students Self-Government Association after last night's riot on the campus of Waseka University in which 18 students and policemen were injured and 147 students arrested.

An estimated 1500 students participated in the Red-led demonstrations, described as the largest of its kind since the surrender. The students staged the riot in an attempt to keep university authorities from carrying out their announced intention to discipline 26 students charged with subversive activities on the campus.

$32,500 Gift To Policeman Under Probe

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (AP).—Chicago's mayor today called for formal statements concerning a $32,500 gift reported made to a police captain by a race news service operator.

Democratic Mayor Martin H. Kennelly said he is not judging Police Capt. Thomas Harrison "on the basis of news items."

Harrison told the Senate Crime Committee yesterday he got $32,500 as a gift, "out of friendship," from the late John J. Lynch, former partner in a race information service, in 1936 or 1937.

Harrison, who gets $5200 a year as police captain, said Lynch gave him the cash after Harrison acted as a bodyguard for Lynch when Harrison was off duty.

Kennelly asked Police Commissioner John C. Prendergast for a statement from Harrison, and the Senate Committee for a copy of Harrison's testimony.

Kennelly told newsmen two weeks ago that if any city employe has "income derived from illegal sources we will take action if we are presented with the facts."

Committee investigators today questioned Thomas Kelly, sr., manager of Continental Press Service, a Nation-wide distributor of racing news. Chairman Kefauver said Kelly gave answers "frankly and forthrightly," during the first hour they met. Kelly returned for an afternoon hearing.

Commenting on testimony taken this morning, Kefauver said his committee had evidence that another race information service, now defunct, was "hoodlum controlled."

He referred to the Trans-American News Publishing Co., set up in 1946 and previously reported controlled by the Capone-Guzik-Ricca gang syndicate.

In testimony yesterday, Harrison also told of getting a $10,000 loan from a former gambling syndicate boss while he was amassing a comfortable personal fortune many times the size of his policeman's salary.

Gilbert Questioned

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the State's attorney's office and Democratic candidate for sheriff, was questioned how he manage dto amass his admitted $365,000 fortune. Gilbert, who appeared voluntarily before the committee, said he made his money in legitimate deals in stock and grain market investments.

Mrs. Charlotte Campagna was the first witness called into the committee room today. She is the wife of Louis ((Little New York) Campagna, former Capone gangster. Campagna was one of the men convicted in 1944 of conspiracy to extort one million dollars from movie producers. He is now on parole.

Kefauver announced the Chicago hearings will be ended, at least temporarily, at the end of sessions today.

Ex-Inspector Is Sentenced For Contempt in Bribe Quiz

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—Police Commissioner Thomas F. Murphy said today he had ordered 10 former plainclothes policemen to appear before the Kings County grand jury and that two of them promptly applied for retirement.

Hofsaes

The grand jury is probing million-dollar payoffs to crooked city police by a huge gambling combine. A number of policemen, including top-ranking officers, have testified before it.

At the same time, Murphy disclosed he had demoted 12 detectives. He did not announce the reason.

The two former plainclothesmen who filed for retirement from the force were Sergt. James M. Duffy and Patrolman James Sparacino, both assigned to Brooklyn precincts. By their action, they assume the status of a private citizen and do not have to waive immunity when they appear before the grand jury. Municipal employes must waive immunity.

Yesterday, a retired police inspector was sentenced to jail for contempt. A 30-day jail term and a $250 fine were imposed on former Inspector Frederick A. Hofsaes for refusing to talk about a television set—allegedly a bribe from bookie Harry Gross.

County Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz, who imposed sentence on the 57-year-old Hofsaes, released him until tomorrow morning to give him a chance to appeal the penalty.

District Attorney Miles F. McDonald said a new—and possibly sensational—tack in the rackets probe would start today when the special grand jury considers "an entirely different matter."

There was conjecture that the new angle was another big gambling ring—not connected with the alleged twenty-million-dollar-a-year syndicate headed by Gross.

Gross, held in jail as a material witness, has told of paying one million dollars a year to police for protection.

Japan Offers Plan To Stabilize Silk Prices of World

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—Japan today presented to the International Silk Congress a plan designed to stabilize fluctuating raw silk prices on the world's markets.

The plan would establish both ceiling and floor prices. It would create a control group in Japan that would operate much like the Commodity Credit Corporation in the United States. This body would regulate and support the industry, buying silk when that commodity sagged and selling when the market improved.

700 More Anti-Reds Atrocity Victims

Beamed to Europe

Grew Calls 'Radio Free' Aid to 'Voice'

Joseph C. Grew, former Undersecretary of State, last night described Radio Free Europe as "a powerful supplement," not a competitor, to the Voice of America.

Grew, president of the privately-sponsored Radio Free Europe, spoke to 400 persons attending the fiftieth anniversary dinner of the Holton-Arms School for Girls at the Chevy Chase Club.

Unhampered by Government restrictions, he said Radio Free Europe is "the voice of John Q. Public."

"I hope our Crusade for Freedom will be heard and carefully pondered by Communists everywhere," he declared. "We have no choice but to combat lies with truth."

Radio Free Europe is broadcasting six hours daily to five Iron Curtain countries.

Other speakers included Judge Brice Clagett, chairman of the school's board of trustees, and William P. McCracken, jr., chairman of the anniversary program.

The dinner opened the school's fund-raising drive to liquidate a loan obtained for a recreation center which will be completed this winter.

HAMHUNG, Korea, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—New Communist atrocities were uncovered today with the discovery of the bodies of 700 civilian anti-Communists crammed into a well and piled in a tunnel behind Hamhung's big, modern prison.

The slaughter, discovered by the advancing South Korean Capital Division, raised the number of atrocity victims found in the last week to more than 1800.

Some of the victims, among whom were teen-aged high school students, had been stuffed into a 60-foot-deep well. Most were found in the tunnel. The helpless prisoners had been beaten and shot by the Reds.

The slaughter aroused the emotions of this oriental city. Boys whose fathers lay mutilated before them shouted to crowds to help Republican forces eliminate Communists from the country. Children asked for guns to shoot Reds as mothers, wives and daughters of the victims stood wailing before the prison.

In Chongpyong, a few miles south, the Communists killed 14 civilians, who were found two days ago. The Eighteenth Regiment of the Capital Division found six more bodies in a ravine at Chigyong, five miles north of Chongpyong.

The Chigyong victims were South Korean prisoners of war. Those found near Chongpyong were anti-Communists and religious leaders — most of them elderly.

Civilian witnesses told American military advisers the Reds beat the Chongpyong victims with fence posts and then buried them alive. The prisoners of war were bayoneted to death.

Discovery of new atrocities added to a long list of murders discovered by the ROK army as it raced northward from Wonsan.

More than 500 anti-Communist high school students were shot at Wonsan. Five hundred more — victims — prisoners of war—were found tortured, starved and slaughtered in Kowon and Yonghung.

Americans with the South Koreans said they could not understand the psychology behind the bloody trail of the Communist retreat.

Turk, Bulgar Snarl Halts Orient Express

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—The government today stopped free transit of the famous trans-Europe Orient Express from Bulgaria across the northeastern tip of Greece to Turkey. Henceforth, passengers must get off at the Bulgarian border and cross Greece to Turkey by bus.

British Trade Surplus Sets Postwar Record

LONDON, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—Britain had a surplus of 52 million pounds ($145,600,000) in its trade with the rest of the world for the first half of 1950—largest for any half-year since before the war—the government announced today.

A treasury white paper said the figure was achieved by a surplus of 160 million pounds ($448 million dollars) in invisible trade—earnings from such items as shipping, insurance and interest—which more than offset a deficit of 108 million pounds in visible trade—the import and export of goods.

Some First Aid Methods Bad, Doctors Warn

District physicians were briefed here last night on the mistakes even they might make in emergency treatment of disaster casualties.

The potential errors, including some treatments still advocated in first-aid manuals, were given as:

1. Routine rather than rare use of tourniquets for bleeding injuries to the arms or legs.
2. Applications of external heat and routine head-lowering for victims in shock.
3. Immediate and often repeated injections of morphine to numbed, shocked victims who may not need pain relief.

Precautions against such errors were dispensed by three local physicians in a panel discussion before the District Medical Society at 1718 M st. nw.

Panel members were Drs. Lawrence A. Rapee, of Garfield Hospital, with battle-station service during the Ardennes breakthrough; Vincent M. Iovine, assistant clinical professor of surgery, George Washington University, who served on the Italian war front, and William E. Bageant, anesthesiologist, also of Garfield, who served during the war in numerous Army general hospitals.

Dr. Thomas Bradley, GWU assistant clinical professor of surgery, who served as moderator, recalled that treatment errors, some of them fatal, occurred here in the collapse of the Knickerbocker Theater, in 1922; later at the Coconut Grove, Boston, night club fire and panic, and "will probably recur in even greater measure in any future atom-bombing attack."

The panel members agreed that many limbs and sometimes lives are lost as the result of unnecessary tourniquets used to stop blood flow; that hot water bottles, electric blankets or other heat aids can be harmful and are unneeded in shock treatment.

Use of the head-lowering position for shock victims, though generally helpful, may aggravate other conditions, such as head injuries, they said.

As to the blessings of morphine in emergency treatments, they pointed to "many cases of morphine poisoning" encountered in war service. Particularly in cases of victims of shock, the doctors said, the patients may not need the pain-killer, and its use impairs full breathing which is badly needed at the time.

Stubborn Red Fire Stalls Allied Drive for Enemy Capital

no reference to South Korean troops in the city.

He saw enemy rearguards, trying to hold back the United States and South Korean rush less than five miles south and east of Pyongyang, withdrawing into the city. Whether the rearguards would try to fight in the city street by street or follow their comrades north was not yet clear.

AP Correspondent Hal Boyle, who also flew over Pyongyang, said in a dispatch timed six minutes before the Pusan radio broadcast that Red troops were fleeing the lifeless city. He said nothing about South Korean forces having entered the Red capital.

It was considered possible, however, that a small detachment of the South Korean First Division had driven in Pyongyang. The First was striving mightily to beat the United States First Cavalry Division into the old North Korean Red stronghold.

Whether or not Allied troops were inside Pyongyang, the city was doomed to fall to overwhelming United Nations forces in a matter of days, perhaps only hours.

And the Reds knew it.

Boyle said the Red army tag ends retreating from the city in disorder were raising clouds of dust on the horizon as they fled northward.

The fleeing troops, Boyle said, were prize remnants of the broken North Korean army that invaded South Korea suddenly at dawn June 25.

Boyle called them "the selected few chosen for their political loyalty or military ability to try to make another stand nearer the Manchurian border or to plan a long campaign of mountain guerilla warfare." Pyongyang is 100 air miles from the Manchurian border.

A United States Air Force spokesman in Washington said the retreating Red masses were unorganized and were using all means of transportation available.

American F-80 jet planes slashed at the fleeing troops.

In the hills south and southeast of Pyongyang, expendable North Koreans were dug in to cover the escape of the elite Reds.

Pyongyang itself appeared to Boyle from his seat in a tiny observation plane "no longer to be a city at all."

"It is more like a blackened community of the dead, a charred ghost town from which all the living had fled before a sudden plague.

The marshaling yards of two rail lines that converge in Pyongyang were blackened ruins. Blaze-blackened buildings and industrial plants spotted the dying city.

King, flying with Marine night fighter planes giving close support to allied troops, said there probably would be much fighting before the city falls.

If the South Korean First Division has put patrols into Pyongyang, as the South Korean radio reported, it climaxed a brilliant eight-day march of nearly 90 miles from the Red boundary.

The South Koreans had rolled speedily and impatiently northward toward Pyongyang. Ofter their officers had difficulty restraining them.

The Republican First Division earned a reputation for toughness north and northeast of the Taegu anchor of the old southeast Korea beachhead, now only a memory some 270 miles behind the Allies' present fighting front.

On the west end of the surging battle line, the United States Twenty-fourth Division sliced westward toward Chinnampo, the port for Pyongyang. There was no indication how close the Twenty-fourth was to Chinnampo, which is 27 air miles southwest of Pyongyang.

Right behind the First Cavalry, a British Commonwealth brigade of Scottish highlanders, English midlanders and Australians stamped out the last resistance in Sariwon, 35 miles south of Pyongyang.

The brigade overran the city so fast that Red troops were shot down as they tried to escape from their quarters.

There were no fresh reports from the northeast end of the allied line since South Korean troops Wednesday captured the twin industrial cities of Hamburg and Hungnam, 110 miles south of the Korean-Manchurian border.

The U. S. Far East Air Forces said bombers and fighters pounded North Korean Reds in the Pyongyang area Wednesday with "excellent results."

Big B-29s hammered at the Hangung arsenal and storage area a few miles northeast of Pyongyang.

Guerillas Active Far Behind

By-passed North Korean guerillas were stirring up trouble far behind the allied lines.

General MacArthur's headquarters said the Reds had come down from the hills and retaken Kichang, Kunsan, Chongju, Muju, Samchok and Utchin in widely scattered portions of South Korea. There also were guerilla attacks on Mokpo, southwest coast port.

The Reds looted, pillaged, killed South Koreans and ambushed supply columns.

MacArthur's headquarters said 5000 Reds captured in a recent 24-hour period brought the total number of Red prisoners to more than 70,000.

The Wednesday morning communique of the North Korean high command, broadcast by Moscow radio, said the Red army was waging "stubborn defensive battles with the numerically superior enemy."

Says Red Planes Raid U. S. Base

It asserted that North Korean planes were daily raiding the United Nations supply base.

"During the last few days aircraft of the People's army struck blows at the enemy's military installations and communications in the area of the Kimpo Airdrome, of Kaesong, of Seoul and in the area of Seoul-Inchon."

Allied reports said recently that one plane, unidentified, dropped two bombs near the Kimpo Airfield and two in the Inchon harbor without hitting a single target.

NEARER RED CAPITAL—Three solid arrows grouped near the Red capital city of Pyongyang locate the Allied drives. South Korean First Division troops are reported 8 miles from the city. Other South Koreans took Hamhung and Hungnam on the east coast (solid arrow). Meanwhile, Reds who had been bypassed in South Korea stormed from the hills and retook Samchok, Utchin, Chongju, Muju, Kochang and Kunsan (underlined). Some 15,000 Reds were massed near Mokpo (underlined on the southwest coast)

Soil-Hardening Process Shown At Ft. Belvoir

If it's quick road building the military situation requires, the Army and Navy are ready.

Yesterday they showed how they could run a road paving machine—equipped with special gadgets and chemicals—over a barren stretch of Fort Belvoir and leave behind a paved road strong enough to support a jeep within two hours and two-ton loads after 18 hours.

The machines—adapted from available commercial types—are equipped with knife edges that scoop a layer of earth into a small mill, mix it thoroughly with the chemicals and expel it from the rear of the machine just ahead of a vibrating compactor that pats the material into a smooth surface.

The Army type road-builder is adapted to use in clay mixtures most likely to be encountered in land operations or in building airfields for the Air Force. The Navy type uses analine and furfural chemicals to stabilize the beach sands usually found in amphibious landings.

Yesterday, before 100 military and civilian observers, the Army showed its machine, which employs calcium acrylate, and the Navy ran a 23,000-pound truck over a 50-foot stretch laid 18 hours earlier.

The Army "fast" roads were tested by an airport runway tester with a wheel loading of 50,000 pounds—the equivalent of a B-50 bomber.

Melish to Carry Fight for Pulpit To Supreme Court

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—The Rev. John Howard Melish, ousted rector of Brooklyn's Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, today said he will carry his fight for reinstatement to the United States Supreme Court.

Melish's removal 19 months ago by Bishop James Pernette de Wolfe of the diocese of Long Island was protested by a majority of voting members of the parish. But the vestry, which requested the ouster because of his son's association with alleged Communist fronts, took the issue to the county courts, where an injunction was issued upholding the removal.

The State Court of Appeals last week declined to review the case. Melish said today he will seek a Supreme Court review on the ground that the injunction breaches the principle of separation of church and state.

Air Force Lack Held Key to N. Korea Defeat

In Korean War

500 Rescued Or Saved by FEAF Planes

TOKYO, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—Far Eastern Air Force headquarters announced today that FEAF planes had rescued or saved the lives of more than 500 men since the Korean war began.

The FEAF's Third Air Rescue squadron, using helicopters, liaison planes, amphibious planes and specially equipped B-17s and B-29s accounted for the total.

The figure includes seriously wounded men evacuated from front lines and behind the lines, rescues of downed airmen and rescues at sea.

U. S. Reconnaissance Charged by Red China

LONDON, Oct. 18 (AP).—Communist China today formally accused the United States of "actively extending her aggressive war in Korea" by carrying out aerial reconnaissance over China.

Referring to yesterday's Chinese radio charges that United States planes had appeared over Chinese communities October 13 and 14, Peiping's Premier-Foreign Minister, Chou En-Lai, telegraphed the United Nations:

"In the name of the Peoples government of the Peoples Republic of China, I hereby lodge a serious protest against the atrocious acts of invading China's territorial air committed by the military planes of the United States aggression forces in Korea."

He added that the Security Council should take immediate steps to bring about the "prompt withdrawal" of United States troops from Korea.

Navy Flier Sinks Ship With a Single Rocket

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18 (AP).—With a single rocket, Navy Lieut. (J. G.) William D. Blevins of Calera, Ala., sank a 90-foot camouflaged vessel yesterday off the northeast coast of Korea.

Pacific Fleet headquarters in a release here said the ship was believed to have been a minelayer or minesweeper.

"The first thing I saw was smoke pouring out of her and a few minutes later she started settling and sinking," Blevins said on his return to the U. S. aircraft carrier Leyte.

Blevins dropped a 500-pound bomb on a railway bridge in North Korea later in the day, the Navy said.

150 Huk Suspects Seized

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 18 (U.P.)—Two government men were wounded when Military Intelligence units and Manila police outs in Mania early today and raided suspected Hukbalahap hide-rounded up 150 suspects.

TOKYO, Oct. 18 (U.P.) — Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commander of the Far Eastern Air Forces, warned today it would be a serious mistake to use the Korean campaign as a model for planning future military operations.

The success of all Allied operations in Korea has depended on the fact that the Communists had no air force worthy of the name, Stratemeyer said in an interview.

If the North Koreans had possessed an aggressive air force like that the United Nations threw into the fight, "we would not be in Korea today," he said.

Couldn't Harrass Sea Operations

Without air power, the North Koreans could not harrass seaborne operations, could not interfere with airlift operations to captured airports and could not exploit their ground gains fully because U. N. planes pinned them down, Stratemeyer said.

Further, he said, U. N. aircraft could give ground forces close air support unparalleled in history because it did not have to be used in any large degree against enemy aid and strategic targets.

Stratemeyer said fighter sorties were not needed to counter the enemy's inferior airplanes and bombers not only did not have to be escorted, but soon knocked out such strategic targets as there were. This made the big planes available for ground support.

Seventyfive percent of the bomber command's effort was against targets other than the strategic type which B-29s are designed to hit.

Sorties Per Mile

An indication of the scale on which ground forces were provided air cover is the fact that along the old Pusan perimeter in the south, there were about three fighter stories per day per mile.

When it is considered that a fighter could cover the whole perimeter in about 15 minutes, it is easy to see how crowded the air was with fighter planes.

Stratemeyer said the absence of enemy jet fighters made possible United Nations use of F-51 Mustangs and F-4U Corsairs—both piston engine aircraft, which are excellent for ground support if there is no air opposition.

Stratemeyer said nothing in the Korean war changes the basic fact that air superiority must be won before ground and sea forces can move freely in modern war.

Former Zaibatsu Links Off 'Restricted' List

TOKYO, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—All of the 127 overseas operating companies and foreign enterprises of the now-dissolved Zaibatsu combines have been removed from occupation headquarter's "list of restricted concerns," it was announced today.

Roderick M. Gillies, chief of headquarter's fair trade practices division, said the action "clears the records of these concerns which . . . are no longer a part of Japanese economy." It is believed many have ceased to exist or have been taken over by the local governments.

Marine Corps Promotes 4 Generals; 7 Reassigned by Navy

Promotion to major general of four Marine Corps brigadiers and reassignment of seven Navy flag officers was announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

Marine generals to be promoted are:

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, president of the Marine Corps Equipment Board at Quantico, Va., who served as chief of staff of the First Marine Division on Guadalcanal in 1942. He enlisted in the Marines in 1917 and served with the Sixth Marines at Belleau Wood.

Brig. Gen. Edward A. Craig, now commanding the First Provisional Brigade in Korea. Craig entered the corps in 1917, served between the World Wars in the Caribbean and during World War II saw action in the Pacific.

Brig. Gen. Henry D. Linscott, on duty in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations here, who held important staff assignments in the Pacific theater in World War II. Linscott also saw considerable Caribbean service in the 1920s.

Brig. Gen. Christian F. Schildt, chief of staff, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, with headquarters at Norfolk, Va., who won the Medal of Honor on Nicaragua in 1927 for rescuing wounded Marines under fire of insurrectionists. He has been with Marine aviation since 1918 and, in 1926, took second place in the Schneider Cup seaplane races at Norfolk with a speed of 231 miles an hour.

Changes in assignments among Navy flag officers, which were described as "routine," will bring Vice Admiral Jerauld Wright from sea duty to take the post of deputy to the United States representative on the Standing Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He will relieve Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger of the Army.

Rear Admiral Maurice E. Curts was ordered detached from sea duty to become director of the Operational Readiness Division, Office Chief of Naval Operations. He will succeed Rear Admiral Robert P. Briscoe, who has been ordered to sea duty.

Rear Admiral Thomas R. Cooley was ordered to sea duty from the Newport, R. I., naval base, which he commands.

Rear Admiral Ralph E. McShane, now commanding the naval shipyard at Portsmouth, N. H., will succeed Rear Admiral Wallace R. Dowd as assistant Chief of the Bureau of Ships here. McShane will assume command of the naval shipyard at Pearl Harbor.

Reard Admiral Roy T. Cowdrey, now commanding at the Pearl Harbor shipyard, will report here as assistant chief of Naval Materiel and director of the Production Policy Division of the Navy Department. He will succeed Rear Admiral Rico Botta, previously assigned as commander of the Naval Air Materiel Center at Philadelphia.

Capt. Harry D. Felt, recently selected for promotion to Rear Admiral, will serve as acting president of the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., pending arrival of Admiral Richard Connolly. Connolly's transfer to the presidency of the War College from command of U. S. naval forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean has been previously announced.

Greenglass Pleads Guilty To Spy Charge

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—A 28-year-old former Army sergeant who worked on the atomic bomb, pleaded guilty today to conspiring to slip secret Government information to Russia in wartime.

Greenglass

David Greenglass, the chunky former soldier, stood with bowed head and clasped hands before Federal Judge William Bondy as the charge against him was read. He glanced at his attorney, O. John Rogge. The lawyer nodded.

Then, in a firm voice, Greenglass said, "Guilty."

Greenglass, who worked on the atom bomb at Los Alamos, N. Mex., originally was indicted in New Mexico. Then he was named in a superseding indictment with four others, including former Russian Vice-Consul in New York Anatoli A. Yakovlev. The latter is now believed to be in Russia.

In the light of Greenglass, plea it was expected he would turn Government witness to escape the death penalty.

Greenglass was the third American to plead guilty recently to wartime spying for Russia. The first was Harry Gold, Philadelphia chemist. The second was Alfred Dean Slack, sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment after pleading guilty in Greenville, Tenn.

Greenglass allegedly turned over secrets to Gold, a confessed go-between for Soviet agents and British atomic physicist Dr. Klaus Fuchs, admitted spy now in an English prison.

When arrested last June, Greenglass was quoted as saying he didn't think it was fair for the United States to withhold atomic information from its ally Russia.

Named with Greenglass and Yakovlev in the indictment was electrical engineer Julius Rosenberg, 35; his wife, Ethel, and Morton Sobell, 33-year-old radar expert all of New York.

Rosenberg's wife is Greenglass' sister. Allegedly she helped to recruit him into the spy ring.

Pro-Red Strike In Australia Ties Up Ships

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—More than 2000 ships in 56 Australian ports were held up today by a lightning protest strike of dockers against an imminent government decree outlawing the Communist Party.

Red union leaders called out 26,000 dock workers and every port in the country was paralyed.

The government of Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies planned to get a final vote in the Senate Thursday on its tough anti-Communist bill and to outlaw the party formally within a few hours.

Police flying squads were mobilized to raid Communist headquarters throughout the country as soon as the proclamation is issued, seeking evidence under which Red leaders may be prosecuted.

Under the impending law, all Communist Party property is to be seized and handed to an official receiver.

The government itself was ready to start a ruthless purge of leftists—already listed—from all public services, including leftist officials of trade unions.

The Communists defiantly announced they would go underground and continue their activities as outlaws.

Richard Dixon, head of the Australian Communist Party, called for a "mightly effort" by all workers to throw the government out of office.

Members of the Red-dominated unions bitterly denounced the Labor Party—which Menzies' Liberals defeated in a general election last December—for dropping its opposition to the outlawry bill. They called it "the blackest betrayal in the country's history."

Italian Chief Pledges 11 Divisions by June

ROME, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Defense Minister Randolfo Pacciardi, in a bristling speech to the Chamber of Deputies tonight, announced Italy will have "11 army divisions ready for action by June, 1951."

Picciardi said Italy plans to spend about 2 billion dollars on defense in the next three years and asked pointedly:

"What will be the contribution of the United States Government to this?"

General Strike Averted

HELSINKI, Oct. 18 (AP).—The threat of a general strike in Finland was averted tonight. A competent source said some 110,000 striking metal and timber workers had accepted a government proposal to mediate wage demands and agreed to resume work.

Eisenhower Plans 'American Assembly'

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (NYHT).—A project for assembling scholars, businessmen, labor leaders, Government officials and representatives of other walks of life to thrash out in conference the major problems facing the Nation was outlined today by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University.

Eisenhower said the project would be called "The American Assembly" and would consist of a permanent "task force" of research scholars plus periodic conferences of men from other fields of endeavor. He said the first conference would take place next April, and he hoped to have about eight conferences a year.

The project was made possible by the gift to Columbia of Arden House, an estate owned by H. Roland Harriman and W. Averell Harriman in the Ramapo Hills at Harriman, N. Y. The university is seeking a fund of $500,000 to begin operations.

Eisenhower said he expected attendance at each conference would be limited to 30 or 50 participants.

The conferences will not attempt to find perfect solutions or final answers to problems besetting the Nation, but will develop facts and opinions for the guidance of American voters in facing national issues, he said.

As examples he mentioned the problem of maintaining adequate military manpower and financing national defense; the question of how to deal with Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, who claims American aid against Stalin yet is a Communist dictator himself; and the constitutional implications of Federal taxation in competition with State and local taxes.

Eisenhower said he had been planning the "American Assembly" since he became president of Columbia two years ago. The idea grew out of his wartime experiences, when he discovered that too many soldiers did not know why they were fighting and too many young men were barred from military duty because of "mental defects."

Second Loans

World Bank Gives Mexico New-Type Aid

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday granted a new type of loan to aid in the financing of small business in Mexico.

It lent 10 million dollars to a consortium of eight Mexican banks. They, in turn, will lend the money to individual Mexican businesses which need financing to pay for imports necessary for specific developmental projects. Each of these smaller loan projects, as it arises, will be subject to approval of the Mexican banks and the World Bank.

By granting what amounts to a line of credit to the Mexican banks, it is hoped to finance "a broad cross-section of enterprise in Mexico," the World Bank said.

Heretofore, the agency has lent money to Mexico and elsewhere only for specific, individual, development projects.

Bank President Eugene R. Black told reporters that his agency has had two other requests for the new type of loan, to be parceled out within the borrowing nation. One was from a Latin-American, the other from a European nation, Black said.

'Democracy's Allies In Asia' to Be Topic

Florida Hurricane Causes Extensive Damage

PALM TREES TOPPLED—Royal palms on Biscayne Boulevard in Miami were flattened by the hurricane's force. Winds hit 125 miles per hour in gusts as the tropical twister swept over Miami. Damage has been estimated at $6,500,000 coast and the Ridge section to the west.

A survey of fruit industry officials and growers showed that about 5 percent or three million dollars worth of ripening citrus was blown off the trees.

Meantime, National Guardsmen patrolled the almost ruined settlement of West Hollywood, 16 miles north of Miami. Broward County Sheriff Amos Hall reported "considerable looting" in the community. Mrs. Hattie B. Adams, 43, was killed at West Hollywood when her house blew down.

An unidentified Negro was found dead in the wreckage of his home at nearby West Hallendale.

Miami Safety Director O. D. Henderson said that the damage to power facilities was so widespread that two thirds of the city will be without lights again tonight.

Damage in Miami was estimated at $4,500,000 by Henderson. Miami Beach took an estimated $1,500,000 blow and Hialeah about $500,000.

About 500 families in Dade (Miami) and adjoining Broward Counties had no habitable houses. The Red Cross at Fort Lauderdale reported 25 homes destroyed, 250 seriously damaged and 400 others hit in the county. In Miami, eight homes were destroyed, 474 heavily damaged, 4590 damaged and 7700 marked superficially, the Red Cross said.

Meantime, another casualty was a 13-year-old Negro boy, Canute Redden, who drowned while swimming in a wind-whipped storm pool at Sanford shortly after the hurricane passed. The casualty list may climb following reports that 10 crew members of the Cuban freighter Oriente were missing tonight. The 532-ton ship broke in two and sank yesterday during the hurricane.

School personnel under the direction of G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of schools, will be responsible for enumerating all persons under the age of 21 in each school area.

Pupils will be dismissed at noon Friday to enable school personnel to work on the census. However, in schools where double shifts are used, both shifts will meet as usual.

P-TA groups, parents and friends of the schools are cooperating in the house-to-house canvas.

and improvements," he said, but "I haven't found all these things wrong with our present government."

He said the charge of inadequate schools was unfair in that the school facility shortage was Nation-wide.

In attacking the county manager plan, Crain concentrated his fire on the frequently made charge that the present method of electing supervisors is "undemocratic." Crain said, "Electioneering of supervisiors having to go throughout the county for support will spread politics county-wide."

Sees "Pressure Group" Peril

"I cannot agree that we should open our supervisors to the danger of pressure groups and that will happen under the county manager plan as sure as the Lord made little apples. . . . There is no better way to lose control of our government," he said.

He predicted the electorate "will be afraid to make a radical change in their form of government at this time" and added that he would like to see the present form of government continue.

Mrs. Macy, chairman of the Fairfax County League of Women Voters, said the present method "isn't representative government and it isn't democracy."

She described the supervisors now as "jacks of all trades" who must handle all the details of county government.

Under the county manager form, which the league has indorsed, she said, the board of supervisors would make policy only and the appointed manager "decides the details."

Pointing to two other Virginia counties—Warwick and Henrico—Mrs. Macy said both had found the county manager plan effective and had "made substantial savings in the cost of government."

System Criticized

The third speaker, Hirst, Annadale real estate man and chairman of the Fairfax County Good Government Committee, joined with Mrs. Macy in hitting the methods of electing supervisors. The committee also favors the county manger plan.

Hirst said the board is "not responsible to the people over whom it has the power of local government."

This, he blamed on the system of elections whereby the Centreville District with only 4444 people has one representative on the board and the Mount Vernon District with eight times as many has the same number.

Hirst complained that residents are "some four or five steps away from responsibility" in approaching the school problem. He said the school board is appointed by a school electoral trustee board, which is, in turn, appointed by the circuit court judges, who are, in turn, elected by the General Assembly.

He charged these major defects in the present county government plan: Failure to provide adequate school service; adequate sanitary facilities; "falls short rather seriously in representation"; has overlapping departments and diffused responsibilities.

Plans Analyzed

The hot Fairfax battle is over these plans of government from which voters will choose in the referendum November 7:

1. Under the present form, the Board of Supervisors, elected separately by the voters of each magisterial district, governs the county. It has an executive secretary with limited powers.

2. The county executive form would continue the present separate election of supervisors by districts. Each voter would ballot for one of the six supervisors. The appointed county executive would need the supervisors' approval in appointing department heads.

3. Under the county manager form, the supervisors would still be elected from districts, but the voting would be at large, that is, by all the voters in the county. The appointed county manager would have authority to appoint department heads without obtaining the approval of the supervisors.

Fairfax Minority Report Praises Manager Proposal

Martin T. Webb, member of the Fairfax County Government Study Commission, yesterday filed a minority report favoring a change to a county manager form of government in the county.

Webb, who lives in Annandale, opposed the commission's majority report filed last month by 19 of the 21 members in favor of the county executive form of government.

He said Bernon Lynch, another commission member recorded as favoring the county manager plan, was "in agreement with the principles" of his minority report.

The comprehensive 25-page minority report praised the commission for advocating a change from the present board of supervisor, but said its recommendation for the executive form fell short in that "it will not meet the needs of Fairfax County today."

Webb criticized the conditions under which the commission was created.

"It was no secret that the commission was set up at the request of those openly opposed to the county manager form. It was no secret that many of its members were opposed to the county manager form and that I favor it," he emphasized.

The present system "has no responsible head with authority to consolidate and coordinate the various functions of the county," Webb said. He declared the board "has some semblance of policy making and administrative control over functions representing only 8 percent of the county expenditures." Another 89 percent is under offices controlled by State appointments, he said.

Another defect is that the Board of Supervisors is "charged with too many administrative details to permit it to give the needed time to developing the programs necessary to meet the current and impending needs of the country," Webb said.

A third criticism, according to Webb, is that the method of budget reporting is "incomplete and inadequate."

As for the commission-recommended executive form, Webb declared it "would perpetuate the involvement of the Board of Supervisors in administrative responsibilities and details" and it "does not correct the disproportionate basis of representation."

Speaking for the county manager plan, Webb said it would give the Board of Supervisors complete control over almost all policy-making for county business; it would relieve the board of administrative responsibility; it would provide a systematic internal organization for carrying out board policy and it would bring all county functions under a board responsible to the voters of "the entire county."

Webb cited Henrico County, Va., where, he said, the institution of the manager form resulted in a 26 percent cut in the general county levy in the first year of operation.

Further, Henrico's per capita cost of Government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1948, was $49.56, as compared to $50.54 for Fairfax County, he said. The final per capita road cost in Henrico was $41.99, as compared with $50.54 in Fairfax, Webb asserted.

Webb complained that the county has suffered "a great injustice due to faulty financial relationship between the State and localities with regard to "road funds and distribution of profits from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board."

Gibbons Denies Charges Against Taxpayer Group

Edward T. Gibbons, president of the Fairfax Taxpayers' Advisory Association, yesterday replied to an attack by eight former officers who criticized association indorsement of the county manager proposal.

Gibbons denied that the meeting at which the indorsement was made, was improperly called. He said written announcements were sent to all members.

Of the eight men who signed the statement, released Sunday, Gibbons said five refused to continue with the association after its action on the county manager plan. Three, he added, had not attended a meeting since before the indorsement.

Police Seize 6 Pinball Machines In Arlington; To Be Destroyed

Arlington Police yesterday "raided" four county business places and confiscated 6 pinball machines, 5 of which they said gave customers free plays.

Police Chief Harry Woodyard and Detective Russell Runyon, Arlington's so-called "one-man vice squad," made the morning raids, armed with search warrants issued by Commonwealth's Attorney Denman Rucker.

They nabbed: 2 machines from the Blue & Gray delicatessen, 1140 N. Quincy st., adjoining Washington-Lee High School; 2 more from Clarke's Store, 5019 Wilson blvd.; 1 from the Wilson Tavern, 3505 Wilson blvd., and 1 more from the Pershing Cutrate Store, 2649 N. Pershing dr.

Rucker said five of the confiscated machines were illegal under Virginia law because they gave the customers free games and thus were classified as "slot machines."

He said all six would be destroyed, and no further action would be taken against the owners.

He identified the owner of the five machines as the Arlington Music Corp. of 2030 N. 16th st., Arlington, operated by Sam Lano.

Meanwhile, the Hirsch Coin Machine Co. yesterday filed suit in Arlington Circuit Court asking exemption from a $1000 State license tax on machines it operated in the county.

The suit, against Arlington Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green, said the company's machines are "not subject to the license tax" levied by Virginia against "slot machines."

The Hirsch machines, the suit declared, are not slot machines, offer "no prizes, slugs, tokens, or free games." They are run "wholly for the entertainment and amusement of customers."

The sixth machine, taken from the Blue & Gray delicatessen, was not a "free play" machine, Rucker said. It was confiscated because "kids under 16 from Washington-Lee are playing it all the time" in violation of State law, according to Rucker.

The sixth machine is owned by Hirsh de La Viez of 3043 Military rd. nw., who told a reporter the county would "have to return it," because "our machines are not even adaptable to free plays."

De La Viez is owner of the Hirsh Coin Machine Co., 1309 New Jersey ave. nw.

Four hours after the raids, Rucker said he was told by Lano that the pinball machine owner could "remove 7 or 8 more free play machines he has from the county by morning."

Lano currently is awaiting a rehearing on his conviction for extortion last May in Prince Georges Circuit Court. He allegedly threatened a tavern owner to get him to reinstall two of Lano's slot machines. Rehearing of the 1-year sentence was ordered by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Lano could not be reached for comment, but his attorney, Alfred W. Trueax, said he would try to recover the five machines for his client.

According to Rucker, he was tipped about the operation of the machine by an Arlington citizen. The report later was confirmed by a police observer, Rucker said.

Elephant Boy Cleared Of Paternity Charge

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18 (U.P.)—Sabu, elephant boy of the movies, was cleared today of a charge that he was the father of an illegitimate daughter born to British ballerina, Brenda Julier, 24.

A superior court jury reached a verdict declaring the Indian actor was "not the father of the child" after deliberating for two hours and 45 minutes. Jurors said after their verdict was reported to Superior Judge Philip Richards that they were not convinced Sabu had been intimate with the dancer as she claimed.

U. S. Housing Seen Growing Less Spacious

By The Associated Press

University of Maryland agricultural extension workers were told yesterday that American housing has "gone backwards" in the matter of sufficient space.

Florence Mason, home furnishing specialist from Salisbury, said that while great progress has been made over the last 50 years in such things as sanitation and equipment, "we have gone backward in providing enough space for comfortable living."

She told the annual conference of extension workers that while a clean and sanitary home can help with a family's physical health "an adequate home is necessary to emotional health."

About 150 field workers and campus personnel of the extension service are here for the three-day meeting, which opened today.

In an opening address, Associate Director Paul E. Nystrom of the extension service said that "this country has not yet fulfilled all the dreams which our founding fathers had in mind.

"All of us," he said, "still have a tremendous challenge, and the challenge for the extension service is to help people help themselves."

That is done, he said, through development of better living and better farming practices.

98 Receive Awards At State Department

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The year-long attack against State Department personnel actually has fostered "fine teamwork" throughout the department, Secretary Dean Acheson said yesterday.

Acheson's declaration came at the second annual honor awards ceremony in the Departmental Auditorium where he decorated Angus Ward and several other top diplomats for their part in the global struggle against communism.

A total of 104 State Department employes, including several Washingtonians, received special awards for special accomplishments.

Acheson said some members of his department " have been subjected to unscrupulous and scurrilous attacks by people whose volubility far exceeds their character."

The administrative division, he said, has been under an "added burden" because of the attacks but have answered them "with great skill."

To the 2000 department employes, family and friends in the audience, the secretary added:

"Fine teamwork comes in part from being attacked together. If we are attacked, we rally together."

In a review of the year's activities, Acheson said the "campaign of truth," conducted by the Public Affairs Division, has "taken on new life and vitality and is going forward on a widely expanded scope."

Assistant Secretary Jack K. McFall presided at the two-hour ceremony, and praised the new awards program as "a great morale builder."

As each recipent stepped to the platform, for his medal or scroll, or both, Secretary Acheson shook his hand. He seemed to have a special word for each person. All smiled as they returned to their seats.

Four Ambassadors, all at their various posts yesterday, were given the Distinguished Service Award, the department's highest form of employe recognition. They are Henry F. Grady, Ambassador to Iran; Jefferson Caffery, new envoy to Egypt; John E. Peurifoy, Ambassador to Greece, and H. Merle Cochran, Ambassador to Indonesia.

Peurifoy, who lives at 3425 Albemarle st., Arlington, Va., was cited for the "unique relationship he established with the Congress and for his courageous defense against the baseless charges of communism leveled in 1950 at the department and its employes." He was Assistant Secretary of State for administration before taking the foreign post.

Peurifoy at 43 is a legend in Government circles. Fifteen years ago he came to Washington and got a job running an elevator at the Capitol. After several clerical jobs, he landed in State as an economic analyst in 1938. In seven years he climbed to the top of the Civil Service ladder and three years ago became assistant secretary at $10,000, bossing about 18,000 employes.

Scores of Supporters

A Democrat and a native of South Carolina, Peurifoy's direct, antistriped pants manner has won him scores of supporters on both sides of the aisle in Congress.

Angus Ward, former consul-general at Mukden, who was imprisoned by the Chinese Communists last year, was given an enthusiastic ovation as he was presented the secondary Superior Service Award. He was one of 11 to receive this recognition.

Ward was cited for his "superior service, courage and sound judgment" during his long incarceration in Manchuria. Ward recently was named consul general at Naikobi, Kenya. He lives at Hotel 2400.

The department's second highest award also went to another official whom Washington has known many years — Michael James McDermott.

"Mike" McDermott has been advising Secretaries of State, 10 to be exact, on press relations the past 30 years.

"Outstanding Contribution"

The special assistant to the secretary for press relations, who lives at 1855 Upshur st. nw., was decorated yesterday for a "notably outstanding contribution to the public service" and for "organizing and maintaining a relationship with the press that has been of great value to his Government in the conduct of domestic and foreign relations."

Two other Superior Award recipients were Frank R. McCoy and J. Hall Paxton.

McCoy, former United States representative on the Far Eastern Commission, was honored for his "patience and tact as chairman of the Far Eastern Commission and as United States member in achieving inter-allied agreements on basic postwar policy for Japan.

He retired from that position last Decmeber and now lives at 1633 31st st. nw. A West Point graduate, General McCoy served 45 years' active Army service, including tours of Cuba, the Philippine insurrection, Mexican border clashes and the First World War.

As a diplomat, he was called on by President Coolidge to supervise the Nicaraguan elections in 1927.

The soldier-diplomat was selected by President Hoover as the American member of the League of Nations Commission to investigate the Japanese invasion of Manchuria in 1932.

Consul General Paxton was cited for his courage and loyalty in the evacuation of a consular party from Tihwa, Sinkiang, in a hair-raising escape from the Chinese Communists in August, 1949. Their route took them over the Himalaya Mountains to New Delhi, India. Paxton joined the foreign service in 1925 and was appointed vice consul at Nanking. He served at several posts in China until forced out of that country a year ago. He lives in Danville, Va.

Secretary Acheson presented the Meritorious Service Award posthumously to Paul Alling, the first United States Ambassador to Pakistan. He died here in January, 1949. His wife, Mrs. Romaine Alling, accepted the award. The late Ambassador, a career diplomat of 24 years' experience, was credited with "establishing a firm foundation for American-Pakistan relations." Mrs. Alling lives at 1512 33d st. nw.

Other Washington residents honored yesterday included:

Mrs. Mildred P. Allport, chief of the Evaluation and Reports Unit, Division of International Libraries and Institute, for "outstanding service in creating closer cultural relationships between the United States and Switzerland at the Bern legation. Mrs. Allport, mother of two children, lives at 2239 Q st. nw.

Wounded in Line of Duty

Thomas J. Gannon, Foreign Service officer who was wounded in line of duty. Gannon now on the staff at the American Embassy in Honduras, was honored for "meritorious service and heroic action as a guard at the Embassy in Jerusalem. He was seriously wounded in line of duty in May 1948." His present address: 5-K Eastway rd., Greenbelt, Md.

Robert L. Clifford, of 3724 T st. nw.: for "outstanding service rendered in evacuating American citizens from Taunggyi to Rangoon during the civil war in Burma in 1949. He is now stationed in Beirut.

Mrs. Muna Lee, foreign affairs expert in the Bureau of Inter-American Affairs: "for exceptional contributions in the field of Latin-American culture during the last 25 years." A poet, Mrs. Lee came to Washington in 1941 from Puerto Rico, first to head the activities of the National Women's Party. She lives at 1121 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Miss Eunice Lincoln, principal correspondent reviewer: "for sustained work performance" in the correspondence review section and for "effectiveness" in coordinating the functions of other departmental units. With the State Department since 1918. Miss Lincoln lives at 1028 Connecticut ave. nw.

West Europe Heartened by Truman Speech

LONDON, Oct. 18 (AP).—President Truman's San Francisco speech calling on Russia to display a will for peace was greeted warmly in parts of Western Europe and with silence in the Soviet-dominated East.

Newspapers in the zone of Russian influence published nothing at all about the address. Their silence was matched up to this noon by the Eastern radio stations. But the address was big news in Western European lands.

West German newspapers published the text under such banner headlines as, "Truman Warns Soviets Against New Aggression," "Truman Demands Lifting of Iron Curtain" and "Truman Demands Russians Give Proof of Will for Peace."

In Rome, the Communist newspaper L'Unita published a short summary under the caption "War Policy of Washington Intensified."

The independent Roman newspapers used splash headlines saying "Peace or War in the Hands of Moscow," and "We Will Oppose Force With Force, Says Truman." There was no editorial comment.

In Paris the independent Le Figaro hailed the address "a great speech," and added "The solemn warning to the imperialists of Moscow makes the talk an episode of considerable international importance."

Other Paris newspapers, notably the right-wing L'Aurore, observed that Truman had the forthcoming American elections in hand.

"The chief of the Democrats," said L'Aurore, "was obliged to speak with firmness to prevent the Republicans from presenting themselves to the people as the champions of a strong America."

Other French newspapers said the address lacked concrete declarations of American political policies in the Orient.

Most London newspapers, although cramped for space, published extensive excerpts. There was no immediate editorial comment.

Green, Smith Differ On Truman Speech

President Truman's foreign policy speech at San Francisco was "admirable" to Senator Green (D., R. I.), but "disappointing" to Senator Smith (R., N. J.).

Another of the comparatively few lawmakers in Washington during the Congressional recess, Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.), expressed the hope Russia will heed the President's suggestions on world peace.

If Moscow does approve them, McKellar told a reporter, "Russia will be wise and the world tremendously better off."

Senator Smith commented in a statement:

"We are all in accord with the idea of a 'partnership for peace.'

We are all opposed to the 'new colonialism' which, as the President said, Russia is seeking to impose on the people of Asia and other parts of the world."

Smith added, however, that what the people want to know "Are the views of General MacArthur with regard to our Far Eastern policy which certainly have differed with the Administration's."

Smith said the people want to know also, "whether we propose in the future to be guided by the judgment of General MacArthur and those on the ground who have so brilliantly saved us in the Korean crisis in spite of all the mistakes in Washington."

Senator Green, in calling the President's speech "an admirable statement that shows a comprehensive grasp of our international problems," added to reporters:

"It would have been unwise for the President to go farther than he did in his statement. For instance, the Formosan question concerns other things in other nations and I don't see how he reasonably could have been expected to say more about it than he has at this particular time."

In Reno, Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) commented: "I wish the President had said something new."

Two Store Chains Cut Two Cents Off Coffee Price

Two store chains in this area have dropped prices on several brands of coffee 2 cents a pound, spokesmen said yesterday.

Prices were cut Monday on A. & P.'s own brands of bag coffee, followed by similar reductions Tuesday on bag coffees distributed by Safeway Stores. Safeway cut prices yesterday by the same amount on vacuum packed coffee.

Distributors of other nationally advertised brands said they did not see any retail decrease in sight at this time unless the green coffee market, which has dropped about one cent a pound, sags further.

They described current decreases as partly competitive and partly due to consumer resistance to current prices.

Russia, China Won't Intervene MacArthur Tells Truman

through second-hand leaks by officials who accompanied the President but did not sit in on the Truman-MacArthur private meeting," Knowland said. As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, he demanded the full text of any story given out here be cabled to General MacArthur.

"These partial facts may or may not express accurately the understanding, if any, relating to Formosa reached at Wake Island," he concluded.

One result of the four-and-a-quarter-hour talk on Wake was reported to have been a decision that Communist resistance appeared to be crumbling so rapidly that no further amphibious landing behind the Red front would be necessary. The conferees were said to be in substantial agreement that United States forces should be withdrawn when a nation-wide election can be held in Korea and civil government re-established. Although no time limit was established for this outcome, there seemed to be general agreement that it should be possible by 1951.

Other fields reported to have been covered by the conferences included these:

1. While MacArthur was not promised any increase in the number of divisions in his command, the four now assigned to him would be maintained at full strength rather than at 60 percent as formerly. The Republic of Korea was reported to have eight divisions in addition to some 30,000 troops who have been serving as members of United States units. It was felt the republic should be given a small air force and navy.

2. MacArthur is now making a survey of what will be necessary for relief and rehabilitation of Korea and its people. The controlling questions of priorities and probable costs are yet to be determined.

3. What should be done by way of diverting equipment to Indo-China where the French are hard pressed by Communist forces. The whole matter is under study but any solution must recognize the fact that military stocks in Japan were seriously depleted by the Korean effort and must be replenished.

4. The conferees agreed in principle on measures to be taken in handling Communist prisoners of war captured in Korea. What these measures included has not been disclosed.

Both Mr. Truman and General MacArthur were said to have come away from their first conference, each with great respect for the other's abilities. As one official pointed out, MacArthur has been in the Orient 13 years and that he and the President never before had met each other. It was melt that their conference should lead to even closer cooperation between them than in the past.

Cleveland Park

For a long time the citizens of Cleveland Park have wanted a library and community building which will serve as a center for their cultural interests and neighborhood activities. They have done more than wish for this community asset. Several years ago the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association raised $30,000 and gave it to the District Commissioners to be used as a part payment for the lot on which this structure was to be located. The project was given top priority in the recommendations of the Board of Library Trustees for capital library expenditures. On Monday, David Rankin Barbee, chairman of the association's library committee, appealed to the Commissioners to grant an appropriation of $275,000 to bring the building to realization. We hope that his appeal is heeded.

What Cleveland Park has hoped and worked for will be desired equally, no doubt, by other residential sections of Washington. Branch libraries are deplorably scarce in this Capital City. The Cleveland Park idea of combining a library with a community center is a thoroughly sound and attractive one. The building is needed, as Mr. Barbee pointed out to the Commissioners, not alone as a repository for books and a place for study but also as a meeting place for citizen groups, as a neighborhood auditorium for plays, concerts and lectures and as a center for educational activities of interest to children of the area. Such a building could be of immense value in welding a neighborhood into a genuine community. Cleveland Park should be, we think, only the first of a number of just such institutions in the District of Columbia.

Postal Deficit

Postmaster General Donaldson has gone to the Interstate Commerce Commission with an appeal for higher postal rates because of the failure of Congress to bring postal income in line with expenses. A 1925 statute makes it possible for the Postmaster General to change rates with the consent of the ICC. The last time this was undertaken in 1930, however, two years were required to get the increases approved. With a prospective deficit of 550 million dollars to be piled up alongside similar deficits in previous years, the department is obviously in need of immediate relief.

For two reasons Congress finds it very difficult to fix reasonable postal rates. It is too busy with other affairs and it is subjected to terrific political pressure to keep the rates below the actual cost of carrying the mail. No doubt the 1925 act was passed in recognition of these factors. But why should the burden of fixing postal rates be thrown upon the ICC? It seems to us that a better arrangement would be to center responsibility in the Postoffice Department itself, acting with the approval of the President. Congress could prevent abuse of such discretion by laying down general guidelines for the fixing of rates for different classes of mail and by providing that postal revenue should approximately equal the total cost of handling the mail, excepting that franked by the Government. The incurrence of enormous postal deficits year after year is an inexcusable evasion of responsibility that can apparently be met only by giving the department more authority to keep its income and outgo in balance.

Moaning At The Bar

Any first-year law school student could have told the American Bar Association that it had no business using Carnegie Endowment funds to propagandize against the genocide convention. The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace is dedicated, as its name implies, to the idea of a peaceful, orderly world resting on a foundation of international law. The genocide convention, adopted by the United Nations General Assembly and recently ratified by a sufficient number of governments to make it operative, is a cornerstone of the kind of structure which the endowment seeks. Yet the Bar Association, using funds made available to it by the endowment for impartial work for peace and law through the United Nations, has been instrumental in preventing ratification of the genocide convention by the United States Senate. The president of the Carnegie Endowment found it necessary, therefore, to write to the president of the A. B. A. charging that "the spirit, if not the letter, of the grant from the endowment has been violated."

This misuse of trust funds seems on the whole less serious, however, than the blindness of the Bar Association in respect of the genocide issue itself. A small group within the organization, almost certainly not representative of rank and file opinion, has raised hobgoblin fears that this country will be accused of genocide because racial discrimination still exists here. This is, of course, a nightmare notion; racial discrimination is undoubtedly reprehensible, but it cannot possibly be called genocide as the term is defined in the United Nations convention. The convention outlaws nothing that the American people have not always outlawed through their Constitution, their traditions and their Christian philosophy.

In Indo-China

The French have been promised priority to Indo-China in the allocation of material aid scheduled for Asia. None can foresee how much further we may have to go. If there were a way to pass on the problem to the United Nations, that would be the best course to pursue. For the job of pacifying the area begins to look like an endless adventure. However, it was not so much the French as our own interventionists that forced the Administration's hand on Indo-China. The French, to be sure, were persistent suitors for aid, but, more than aid, they wanted an American policy, and if we had stood for planned retirement, many, many Frenchmen would have been relieved. To more and more of them the war is distasteful. Hemorrhage is less bearable than damaged pride, and since 1945 they have lost lives and treasure in great quantity. The game, in short, was never worth the candle, yet we have encouraged the French to hang on—indeed, it is said, extracted a pledge that they shall do so—by our policy of limited aid.

Our interventionists are now saying that the situation in Indo-China is a reminder of the situation in 1948 in China. The analogy is clear enough. But the lesson isn't. The interventionists insist that the lesson of the China intervention was "too little and too late." Ergo, let us go beyond limited aid in Indo-China, intervene actively there, and dictate a clean-up of the Viet Minh. But the interventionists wouldn't stop there. Indo-China would then be regarded as a base whence to launch a sort of jihad or holy war against communism in Asia.

This newspaper, which believes firmly in noninvolvement in mainland Asia, nevertheless feels there is more logic in the position of the interventionists than in that of the Administration. The Administration's policy is one of getting a little bit pregnant in mainland Asia. Korea, of course, is an exception, but all-out intervention there was a riposte to a flagrant case of open aggression which, unless repelled, would have killed the United Nations and, moreover, would have left the United States without any standing in Japan. It was an inevitable action. This is not the case in Indo-China. Here a combined war of independence and civil conflict is in progress, and, even if that war has Communist overtones, there can be no gainsaying its basic genuineness. As such there is not the slightest hope of getting any Asian support for our intervention. Indeed the world sees America lined up in defense of colonialism, even though the French have made many concessions to independence and are prepared to make more.

In the present situation in Indo-China there is certainly a likeness to the 1947 intervention in China. But the lesson this newspaper draws from it is that we should not burn ourselves again. The failure in China boomeranged in a disastrous diplomatic defeat which our pride forbids us to bury and which the Asians are not allowing us to forget. It may be argued that the intervention in Indo-China is justified by what appears to be irrefutable evidence that Mao Tze-tung is contributing material aid to the Viet Minhese. As to that, we haven't a diplomatic leg to stand on. We intervened first. Even before we decided upon a limited aid program, we had recognized the Emperor Bao Dai prematurely—in itself, as John Bassett Moore used to say, a form of intervention—and the Emperor soon after took off for Cannes, whence he has just been persuaded to return. We certainly choose peculiar horses to back, forgetful of the motto in our own domestic politics "You can't beat somebody with nobody."

If our policy from the start had been noninterventionist, we would have been perfectly justified in taking action against the Chinese suppliers of Ho Chih-minh's army. And we would have been in the straight with the French. Our limited intervention has not even been equal to the elementary task of stopping aid coming out of the Philippines—a task that was necessary, intervention or no intervention. Surely a new look at the situation with our French friends is required before we get so bogged down in the mainland of Asia that our situation and theirs in Europe will be imperiled.

Rhee's Governors

President Syngman Rhee has not enhanced his position by sending civil governors into North Korea in defiance of the United Nations Interim Commission. Mr. Rhee has long championed Korean unity, and understandably he is miffed at the commission resolution denying his government authority north of the thirty-eighth parallel and calling for temporary U. N. administration of North Korea. But the decision clearly lay within the province of the U. N. commission to make. It follows the pattern of the General Assembly resolution of December 12, 1948, recognizing the Rhee government as legal only in "that part of Korea where the (U. N.) temporary commission was able to observe and consult" during the elections—that is, the territory south of the thirty-eighth parallel. It is possible that in reaching their current decision members of the U. N. commission took account of the antipathy of many North Koreans for Mr. Rhee and acted in the belief that resistance might end sooner if North Korea were under U. N. administration.

No one can question the legal authority of the Rhee government in South Korea. By the same token, however, no one can say whether this government would have been elected if the election had encompassed all of Korea. Until order can be fully restored and a new nation-wide election can be held, the U. N. has a responsibility to protect the interests of the newly freed North Koreans. The most logical expedient after pacification is to hold elections for the 100 seats reserved for North Korea in the National Assembly, and then in 1952 to hold new nation-wide elections. Meanwhile, there is nothing to prevent General MacArthur from deputizing South Korean officers to supervise local government in North Korea for the U. N., provided that a check is kept against abuse.

The valiant manner in which the South Korean forces fought and the moderation which has prevailed in Seoul since the liberation entitle the Rhee government to respect. That respect will be best safeguarded, however, if Mr. Rhee and his government avoid the kind of intransigence that kept Korea in a turmoil prior to the 1948 elections. Mr. Rhee's own fortunes were salvaged by the U. N., and he at least owes it the duty of obeying its resolutions. Elimination of the fictitious thirty-eighth parallel division assuredly must be a first order of business. But if Mr. Rhee's government has a real popular following, then he should have no qualms about waiting for an election under U. N. auspices to confirm his authority.

Israeli Shift

The cabinet crisis in Israel is remarkable largely because it is the first upset experienced by a government elected less than two years ago—or the first, if you prefer to look at it that way, in the past 2000 years of Jewish history. Israel's only general election was held in January, 1949, when the Knesset, or Parliament, was chosen. The initial cabinet, headed by Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, was necessarily a coalition one, since the largest party represented in the Knesset, Ben-Gurion's Mapai Party, commanded only a third of its votes. His resignation on Sunday was brought about by differences of opinion within the coalition regarding economic policy. Ben-Gurion has been unsuccessful in attempts to win a vote of confidence from the Knesset, which reconvened on Monday after a two-month recess; presumably the Knesset will be dissolved in about a fortnight and a new general election will be held.

There is no occasion for concern in all of this as to the stability of the fledgling nation. What has taken place is nothing more than a rather healthy manifestation of the democratic process. Israel faces certain severe economic problems. The members of the rightist religious-bloc parties who participated in the coalition cabinet have chosen to withdraw from it, and some new alignment will be necessary. It is unlikely that the change will be more than a minor one. Ben-Gurion will certainly serve again as Prime Minister, and it is taken equally for granted that Moshe Sharett, who arrived in Washington yesterday for conferences at the State Department, will continue as Foreign Minister. Two or three changes in the cabinet are probable, with posts going to new elements in what must again be a coalition. Israel's position as an exemplar of genuine democracy in the Middle East will be unaffected by this parliamentary regrouping.

Income Distribution

Dr. Simon Kuznets has made some interesting discoveries about the distribution of the income of the American people. His investigation for the National Bureau of Economic Research indicates that between 1939 and 1945 there has been a sharp decline in the percentage of total income received by upper-income groups, with only a slight subsequent increase in this proportion by 1948. The 1 percent of the population at the top of the income scale, for example, received 13 percent of total income before taxes in 1939 and only 9.5 percent in 1945. The surprising feature of this finding is that the decline was not due to increases in upper-bracket income taxes, as most people would assume. In case of the 5 percent of the population in the high-income groups, income shares before taxes dropped from 28 to 19.5 percent between 1939 and 1945.

In the interwar period 1919-38, Dr. Kuznets found that the amount of income received by individuals in the top 5 percent group was more stable than that of the remaining 95 percent. Hence, although the amount of income received by this high-income group rose during periods of business prosperity and fell during years of depression, its percentage share of income tended to decline in good times and to rise during periods of recession. Not only do the upper-income groups save a much higher proportion of their incomes than the lower-income groups—as is to be expected—but the percentage of income saved does not change as much with increases or declines in the amount of income as it does in case of lower-income groups. As a result, the upper-income groups provide a much larger proportion of the savings available for investment in times of depression than in periods of prosperity.

Studies of this kind do more than satisfy our curiosity as to the distribution of wealth. They provide valuable information for businessmen and capitalists, whose sales of goods and investment operations are affected by income shifts.

Case Of Lieut. Gilbert

The case of Lieutenant Gilbert, condemned to death for refusal to obey an order in North Korea, raises the question of whether it makes good sense to keep in force the rule inflicting the death penalty for this offense. In the year 1950, in the Army of the United States, that rule seems anachronistic. We borrowed it from the European armies of two centuries ago. Today we know that the military morale which makes men go forward in the face of great danger grows primarily out of group solidarity, rather than out of individual fear of execution for disobedience.

Where morale fails, the fault normally lies as much with the superior officers responsible for morale-building techniques as with individual soldiers. Surely intelligent penalties could be devised which would be as effective in preventing disobedience as the death penalty, and which would protect the Army against the resentments stirred up by such cases as that of Lieutenant Gilbert.

ALBERT Z. CARR.
Washington.

If we are to assume that those war correspondents who are responsible for the unusual publicity are qualified for their jobs, we must follow with the assumption that they know better than to believe that Gilbert was ever in any danger of the death sentence, for they must know that during the past two World Wars the death sentence in all similar cases was commuted by the President of the United States, if not by lower reviewers, and without pressure from correspondents, PROs or chaplains.

In the circumstances, it seems particularly pointless for correspondents to persist in throwing this case around in press and on radio. It sounds too much like what Malik and Vishinsky would do with an opportunity to give the world the false impression that it was only because of Gilbert's color that he was court-martialed in the first place, and only because of his color that he stands in danger of the death penalty.

Religious Instruction

Your story of October 14 concerning the proposed plan of the Fairfax County Association of Churches to use a "mobile classroom" in taking religious instruction to the school children of the county contains this statement: "It will supplant the earlier program of religious instruction in Fairfax County schools, banned by a Supreme Court decision." This statement reflects a widely accepted misconception concerning the Supreme Court ruling which I would like to correct.

The ruling referred to was handed down in the so-called "McCollum Case" brought in Champaign, Ill., in 1948. The decision did not ban religious instruction in public schools, but only the plan then in effect in Champaign. Champaign revised its plan to meet the objections ruled on by the Supreme Court and is at present holding religious classes in the schools under the revised plan.

In New York, which has a program of weekday religious education similar to that now in operation in Virginia, the program has been upheld in a court decision and continues to operate successfully.

J. Lindsay Almond, attorney general of Virginia, gave an official opinion on the Virginia plan of weekday religious education after the McCollum decision in which he said, "So long as the plan operates in this (the Virginia plan) manner, it is my opinion that it is constitutionally unobjectionable."

During the 1949-50 school term there were approximately 44,000 children enrolled in weekday religious education classes in Virginia schools. Thirty-three of the 100 counties in the State had the plan in operation. The plan is divorced from school support and control. The parents voluntarily request the release of their children for religious instruction just as they do for any other extra-curricular school activities.

The Supreme Court decision had no bearing upon the former program of weekday religious education in Fairfax County. Sole responsibility for banning the program rests upon the Fairfax County School Board.

U. N. Flag

Someone once said that there could be no "propaganda" were it not for "proper geese." The American people have once again proven their good sense by laughing down the ridiculous charges of Veterans of Foreign Wars National Commander Rauls that the Department of Agriculture was subverting the United States by promoting the making of United Nations flag.

Policy In Asia

The headline on your October 15 article to the effect that President Truman and General MacArthur have "settled our policy in the Far East," and the radio announcement that, in his San Francisco speech Tuesday evening, the President "will announce the future policy of the United States in Asia" make me wonder if I am waking from a Rip Van Winkle sleep.

I do not recall any democratic procedure by which the people of the United States, who will have to do the paying and the dying, commissioned those two gentlemen to retire to an island in mid-Pacific and decide whether this country shall continue to expend its human and material resources in an attempt to prop up a government which the people of South Korea overwhelmingly repudiated at the polls last May, also one in the Philippines which is so corrupt that you devoted several articles to exposing its rottenness a few months ago and a playboy puppet in Indo-China who lolls on the Riviera while his people give their lives to throw off the yoke of French imperialism.

It seems to me a strange kind of democracy that allows two men to assume responsibility of deciding whether this "land of liberty" shall continue to thwart the efforts of two billion people to achieve political and economic freedom. If we do not protest, we should at least change the spelling to "demockracy."

Nehru's Leadership

I am a reader of The Washington Post who "truly loves" his country and also one who, I believe, occasionally does a bit of "thinking," yet I am far from in accord with Victoria L. Munro in the views she expresses in her letter of October 8 under the heading, "Nehru's Leadership."

In the first place, I do not, and apparently, from the vote in Congress, neither do millions of other Americans, believe that we have been indoctrinated with any "Communist bogey." I do not agree that our press is venal or has indoctrinated us with a Russophobia. I happen to have been observing, from a rather unusually favorable seat directly on the sidelines, the actions of the rulers of Russia in the Orient since 1908, and it has amazed me that our people were willing to swallow, for so many years, since 1933, the kind of propaganda that has been handed to us by the politicians on this most important and vital of all international questions.

It was some 40 years ago that a man named Homer Lea wrote a book which he titled The Swarming of the Slavs. It would pay Miss Munro to read it. In it he predicted in 1910 what is happening in 1950.

I studied Far Eastern history very carefully. Since 1883, when Russia, under the czar, seized the port of Wonsan in Korea, the rulers of Russia, first the czarists and later the Communists, have been engaged in constant intrigue to bring the Far East under their power.

It seems strange that Mr. Nehru, with his reputed great historical knowledge, should not have known the facts. Yet in the short space of time that Mr. Nehru has been attempting to give us advice he has given us, in my opinion, some very poor advice. He has advised us to recognize Red China. Nothing, in my opinion, that we could do would turn out more disastrously.

We paved the way for Russian success in the Far East, first at Yalta, where Mr. Alger Hiss and Mr. Harry Hopkins sat at the right hand of a very sick President. The result was that we committed ourselves to a course of action that resulted in the present success of the Reds in China. We not only agreed to give Russia, for what turned out to be nine days of fighting against Japan, the southern half of Sakhalin, the Kurile Islands, 800 miles by air from our bases in Alaska, but the Japanese rights in Manchuria and the submarine base at Port Arthur. In addition we undertook, after recognizing Russia's aggression in Mongolia, to have Nationalist China sign a treaty of "friendship" with Russia, which was signed the day before Japan surrendered, in which China agreed to these gifts by us and Great Britain of her territory and of Japan's territory to Russia.

Then when Chiang Kai-shek refused to listen to the succession of "advisers" whom Franklin D. Roosevelt sent to him in an effort to get him to agree to take the armed Reds into his government, General Marshall was sent to try to clinch the deal. He failed and then, as Secretary of State, withdrew all further support from Chiang Kai-shek.

It is after this succession of tragic events in our handling of the situation in the Far East, that Mr. Nehru steps up and advises us to recognize the Reds in China. I agree that "thousands of thinking Americans today are filled with an overwhelming sense of frustration and shame" but it is not for the reason that Miss Munro suggests. It is because we know that it is the purpose of the Acheson apparatus, in the State Department, with active support now from the Department of Defense, to, by hook or crook, bring about our recognition of Red China and its recognition by the United Nations; that, in fact, a deal to this end was arranged, as early as last July, with the connivance and assistance of Mr. Nehru, as go-between, between Red China, the United States and Great Britain, whereby in return for such recognition, Red China would not intervene in Korea or take Hongkong.

Once Red China is recognized by the United Nations, Chiang Kai-shek, who represents the only effective resistance to Russian aggression in the Far East today will be a "man without a country" and under the Cairo declaration and the Potsdam Agreement, we will be required to turn over Formosa to Red China, as the "government of China."

Rediscovery Of The U. N.

By Malvina Lindsay

People's Response

THE NEARLY 5-year-old United Nations seems at last to be getting something warmer from the public than pale good wishes and wobbly hope. An important psychological happening today is the snowballing public enthusiasm for the birthday celebration next week of the yet-infant world organization.

Some of this is owing to the U.N.'s recent show of vigor concerning Korea. In this country interest may have been stepped up by television, particularly through Soviet Delegate Malik's effective performance in the role of villain in the Security Council.

However, the feeling is basically deeper. It has been steadily building up, as visitors, letters, telegrams and even telephone calls to Lake Success have evidenced. And this year, with mounting world confusion and fear, many are reaching out to the U.N. as a last hope against war. This also may be a time when the people's instincts are moving faster than their leaders' thinking.

The recent hullaballoo over the flagmaking project for the U. N.'s birthday Tuesday has directed attention to how widespread are plans in this country for that occasion. Committees sending out program material are swamped, are even running out of supplies. Since the first of August 65 tons of such material have been shipped to cities, towns, rural neighborhoods by the National Citizens Committee for United Nations Day. One example of a city's enthusiasm is the project in Columbus, Ohio, to charter a train and send 500 persons to Lake Success to attend the ceremonies Tuesday.

THE MAKING of the one-world, blue and white U.N. flag, an idea originated by the National Grange and being carried out by the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture, has especially caught public imagination. In it people, at last, found something tangible they could do to express their aspirations for world cooperation.

"I worked out some of my frustration about the state of the world as I sewed on the flag," wrote one Virginia woman. Many letters that asked for kits carried the refrain "There seems so little we can do."

So far the U.N. has been lacking in material symbols (including a permanent home) to appeal to people's imagination. But when, after the Korean action, it relaxed its regulations to permit its flag to be flown elsewhere than over its own agencies, there was widespread demand for this symbol. Few flags were available commercially. When word got out that flagmaking kits were to be sold for a nominal amount by the Extension Service in preparation for U.N. Day observances, there were 6000 orders for kits before machinery for their distribution could be set up.

Branch offices now are sending out large quantities of kits to such groups as Girl Scouts, 4-H clubs, homemakers' clubs, church societies, parent-teacher organizations, women's clubs. A group of rural Maryland women gave their time in the busy canning season in August to make the flag that would serve as the pattern.

THESE homemade flags, possibly a quarter million in all, will fly on U. N. Day on public buildings, always with the United States Flag and in compliance with its code. Like church flags and organization flags, with which Old Glory frequently is displayed (and so far without public rumpus), the U.N. flag must be in the same size and at the same height as the United States Flag, the latter always having the preferred position on the right.

This response of the public to the flagmaking, to all the U. N. day activities and to the Crusade for Freedom shows the general hunger for some concrete way of working for a peaceful world. The fact the public is giving the U.N. the biggest birthday celebration it has yet had is significant.

This, of course, does not insure its survival or its longevity. There was once a great mushrooming of popular enthusiasm for the League of Nations. That collapsed swiftly in disillusionment. Yet interest in the U. N. has been built up more gradually and seems to have a more solid foundation. Also today when words and ideas flash in a second around the world, psychological support of the U. N. is particularly important.

The great tolling of bells, the moments of silent prayer or meditation in tribute to the United Nations that will take place in the country Tuesday may have greater impact on the future than is now realized by pessimistic intellectuals, who shrug their shoulders, or chauvinists who shoot popguns at this latest venture of humanity to end world anarchy.

Ministers In Politics

Mr. "D. D. O." whose letter on "Ministers in Politics" appeared on October 16, knows as well as I that the mental and moral chaos in the world today has been brought on by those who either deny or ignore the existence of a God.

From the head of the family, the city, the State, on up, all recognize that their ultimate power to govern comes from God; those who do not—act accordingly. Subtle as it may be, there is a recognition of this fact by our governmental leaders.

The denial of God leads to a denial of punishment for moral wrongs and injustices. This in turn permits those moral wrongs and injustices (here, some would use Russia as an example). Certainly ignorance and forgetfulness of Him is but a few militant steps from the denial. Perchance a few men of God in politics would help to remind us of this.

The Living Gandhi

By Marquis Childs

Where India Draws Its Goals

NEW DELHI, India.—As Westerners sometimes fail to realize, the ideas in some men's minds and the concepts they hold of life and death are as important as bullets and bread. This applies with special force here in India where the complexities of religions and philosophies escape the minds of most Western observers.

Childs

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru showed me at least eight portraits, photographs and sketches of the late Mahatma Gandhi in rooms of the Prime Minister's official residence here. Each one shows the little saint, dead only two years, in one aspect or another. Yet each, according to Nehru, failed to catch the spirit of the leader who united the Indian people as no one had for centuries. How deep his hold still is on the great mass of Indian people no one can say. But there is no question of the influence of his nonviolence philosophy on the men and women directing this greatest experiment in democracy in Asia.

Nehru explains that the Gandhi hold on the people is partly due to the way in which he appealed to the Indian character with his love of renunciation. That character, in many respects, is feminine and, therefore, shrinks from aggression. Gandhi also appealed to the Indian belief in raising all levels of Indian life by Indian means—the spinning wheel and the puritanical simplicity of living that rejects dependence on Western machines. In a long exposition of the beliefs of his beloved saint, Nehru told me he thought Gandhi's deepest conviction was that bad means can never justify good ends; that if bad means are used, good ends can never be achieved.

THIS influence of Gandhi helps to explain the doubts of the Western use of military force to put down aggression. It also explains the rejection of Communist techniques which are based on the belief that any means is justifiable to attain the ends of the theoretically perfect state.

On the practical level the conviction is deep in the minds of all the leaders in the Indian government that a generation of peace is necessary to reconstruct the land torn and broken by partition, communal riots and the presence in India of eight million refugees from Pakistan. This is the major reason for India's policy of supercaution in the United Nations. Already soaring commodity prices as a result of the Korean war and rearmament have had an unhappy effect on India's deteriorating economy.

But just how India shall be reconstructed is a matter of dispute, arising partly out of the heritage of Gandhism. Nehru never made any secret of his distrust of Gandhi's advocacy of the reliance on handicraft and cottage industries and the Mahatma's rejection of modern medicine and technology. Nehru wants to use Western methods to build India a standard of living above the dire subsistence that always is lapsing into starvation, as it is today.

On the other hand is a leader like Purushottamdas Tandon, just elected head of the all-powerful Congress Party. Tandon is represented as an opponent of Nehru but this is only partly true. He is an ardent apostle of the simple life on the side of Gandhism. For example, Tandon rejects modern medicine, including the use of vaccines. He never cuts his beard or hair.

IN A talk I had with Tandon he compared his convictions to those of the Sinn Fein in Ireland. He would replace English as the official language with Hindu as quickly as possible, pointing to the extensive literature in Hindu and in the parent language, Sanskrit, which antedates by many centuries the earliest English literature.

Before the recent party congress Nehru carried the day for his policies in a moving speech and now both men say they will be able to work together. But it is to peace that Nehru always returns in his conversation. This theme is paramount with him, which surprises his visitors, including Senator Claude Pepper who tried unsuccessfully to draw Nehru out on his beliefs regarding the need for help from the United States.

Nehru talks of conquest feeding on conquest. He points to the supreme necessity of knowing what to do with victory before it is won. Without such foreknowledge, victory, in Nehru's view, may be empty or worse than empty.

In his gentle, curiously moving voice he read a quotation from his own book, The Discovery of India. The quotation is from a stone inscription left behind by Ashoka, an Indian conqueror of the third century B. C., who, according to Nehru, was the only conqueror who knew when to stop. After a victory costing him 300,000 lives Ashoka repented and sought thenceforward the conquest of men's hearts.

Nehru read the conclusion of the inscription: "For his sacred majesty desired that all animate beings should have the security of self-control, peace of mind and joyousness." This may sound like a hopelessly naive ideal in the present-day world. But, nevertheless, it probably sums up what is in the heart of the man at the head of a nation of 350 millions.

2 Pilots Missing in Mystery Crash of 3 Jet Fighters and Manassas, said they saw an F-86 flying at about 50 feet a few minutes before Lieutenant Barcus' plane crashed.

Mrs. Bertha Schmidtmanty of Brentville was driving along Route 611 between Nokesville and Aden and saw the plane plough through an open field about 50 yards from the highway. She went to a nearby store to summon help.

Charles Croushorn, a farmer and S. G. Wetzel, jr., son of the proprietor of a Nokesville store, were first to reach the injured man.

Croushorn, an eyewitness, said the plane knocked down three fences and plowed up earth for a mile before it stopped. The plane was demolished. Wreckage was spread over the whole mile area.

Croushorn said the ship started coming down through a small group of cedar trees, sheared off a fence on the Wetzel farm and finally stopped on Bear's farm.

Lieutenant Barcus apparently was thrown clear. Croushorn and Wetzel found him about 30 feet from the plane. He was in a dazed condition. They said he didn't know what had happened and asked to be taken to a doctor. His head and legs were bleeding.

Croushorn and Wetzel took Lieut. Barcus to Nokesville, where he was transferred to the Nokesville Volunteer Fire Department ambulance, then taken to Quantico.

They said he told them that he flew for five minutes after the crash of the other two planes. He said he was traveling at a speed of about 200 knots (less than 300 miles per hour) before he crashed.

Wreckage showed the air speed indicator stopped at 560 miles per hour. The plane clock stopped at 12:05.

Lieut. Kent said the air speed indicator was "not necessarily" indicative of speed at the time of the crash. He said only careful examination of the wrecked plane would show whether its instruments were working when it crashed.

Plans for Andrews Air Base, Navy crash boats, and helicopters and small craft from the Quantico Marine Base searched late yesterday for the two missing jets.

Virginia State Police also joined the search. Parties went out in crash boats along Occoquan Creek at its punction with the Potomac River. A helicopter and boats also searched Lake Jackson, about five miles south of Manassas. Other parties worked in and out of inlets below Quantico, including Chopananisio Lake. Navy officials feared the missing plane might have gone into a 35,000-acre heavily wooded reservation south of Quantico.

The planes had to abandon their search when night fell but ground searchers, including volunteers, continued to look for the missing craft.

A full-scale briefing for search planes will be held at Andrews Air Force Base at 7:15 a. m. today. Lieutenant Kent said that if weather permits, between 33 and 43 planes will search the area during the day. In addition to Andrews planes, the Civil Air Patrol will operate between 20 and 30 planes out of Hybla Valley airport below Alexandria. Quantico Marine Base and Air Sea Rescue also will participate.

Lieutenant Kent late yesterday said he did not think the weather might have been a factor in the plane's crash. The Weather Bureau said there was a ceiling of 900 feet with an overcast, forward visibility of 2 and a quarter miles, fog and smoke, and a nine-mile-an-hour wind from the southeast.

Kent added that whatever had happened to cause the crashes had happened to all three planes.

Air Force officials said the F-86 holds the officials world record of 670.981 miles per hour. Other planes have flown faster, but not under conditions which made their times official.

The Sabre is a single-engine, single-seat fighter with swept-back wings. It carries six 50-caliber machine guns and can carry bombs under its wings.

Andrews Base records show Lieutenant Barcus served as an apprentice seaman in the Navy from March to October of 1946. From May, 1949, to May, 1950, he was in training as an aviation cadet at Williams Air Base, Chandler, Ariz. He has been a jet pilot since May 12.

The missing pilots also are members of the 335th Fighter Interception Squadron.

Justice Chief Asked to Form Israel Cabinet

TEL AVIV, Israel, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—President Chaim Weizmann tonight asked Progressive Party Leader Phinhas Rosen to form a caretaker government until new elections can be held, probably within six to eight weeks, to resolve Israel's first political crisis.

Weizmann asked Rosen, who is Justice Minister, to try to form a temporary government after Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion told the President he was reluctant to head such a government. However, if Rosen refused, there was a chance Ben-Gurion might agree to remain until new elections.

Ben-Gurion's proposal for a one-party government from his own Mapai (Labor) Party was defeated in the Knesset (Parliament) sitting in Jerusalem earlier today. The vote, 53 to 44, climaxed an all-night debate. Ben-Gurion was authorized only to head a caretaker regime until elections.

No date was fixed for the balloting, but the legal committee was asked to submit an election law within a fortnight. Political observers agreed that the key to the elections is held by 300,000 recently arrived refugees, who will be voting for the first time.

After the parliamentary session, Ben-Gurion called at Weizmann's Rehovoth residence to surrender his mandate. Meanwhile, Israel continued her military maneuvers, the most ambitious she has ever held.

Maj. Gen. Yigal Yadin, chief of staff, called on the President last night to report on the progress. He said Israeli naval vessels were patroling coastal waters "insuring the safe arrival of convoys and keeping coastal waters clear of enemy raiders."

Russians Head East's Police, Bonn Reports

BONN, Germany, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—The West German government reported today that Russia has installed Red army officers in all key units of the East German People's Police.

A Yellow Book on the People's Police published by the Bonn government said the "Sovietniks"—Russian officers of field grade—were assigned to each battalion-size "alert unit" and police school.

The Russian officers carry the official title of "assistant to the leader" of the various units, the report said, but in most cases hold rank identical to that of the unit commander.

The Yellow Book identified 49 alert battalions—nine more are in the planning stage—in which the Sovietniks' job was thus described:

"The Sovietnik is a Russian officer who discharges his duties in a German uniform with the alert units. He has no command authority, but "advises" the unit commander.

"At the beginning of every month the Sovietniks are called to a meeting at Karlhorst (Russian headquarters) by the Soviet Control Commission. Here experiences are exchanged and the deficiencies of the various alert units and schools are made clear."

In the 26 schools—11 more are contemplated—the Sovietnik's job is that of "adviser" to the commandant.

Twenty-six of the trained-for-combat alert battalions are stationed in the two states that border on the American zone, the Yellow Book said.

N. Y. C. Is Hanging Out Air Raid Shelter Signs

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—New York City began hanging out its air raid shelter signs today.

From lower Broadway to Rockefeller Center black and white signs bearing the letter "S" and an arrow pointing to the building entrance were placed in and near especially selected buildings in congested areas. Civil Defense Director Arthur W. Wallander said 90 buildings had been selected to provide reasonable underground shelter in case of an air raid.

Walz Team To Speak at Book Affair

Walz Mrs. Walz

Jay and Audrey Walz, who are to speak at the first Washington Post Book and Author luncheon of the 1950-51 season October 26, are a marital team in more ways than one.

In addition to establishing a home in the old part of Alexandria, they have collaborated on a novel, "The Bizarre Sisters."

Married 16 years, the Walzes up to now have been diversifying their efforts, the male Walz as a reporter now with the New York Times, and the female Walz as a writer of mysteries under the name Francis Bonnamy.

The couple freely admit they always have wanted to write a book together, and when they found references to a historic scandal in the Virginia Randolph family, they were able to satisfy this wish.

They will be among five speakers at the first Book and Author Luncheon, to be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel at 1 p. m. on October 26. Others will be Jonathan Daniels, H. Allen Smith and Inglis Fletcher.

Tickets, at $3, are available at the following book stores: Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Community Book Shop, Paul Pearlman, Kann's Book Dept., Francis Scott Key, Pursell's Woodward & Lothrop, Whyte's, Savile's, Sidney Kramer, Airport Book Shop, Center Book Shop in Bethesda and, in Alexandria, Better Mouse Trap and Chequire House.

Book and Author luncheons are also scheduled for January 9, March 8 and April 26.

French Reduce Deficit on Arms Budget

PARIS, Oct. 18 (NYHT).—Franco-American talks on rearmament in Washington have enabled the French government to reduce the deficit on its 1951 military budget from the 771 million dollars originally foreseen to 400 million dollars, and there are prospects of additional United States help it was said here today.

Government officials reviewing the Washington negotiations, which completed a preliminary phase last night and set aside more than two billion dollars in material and free currency assistance for France, said they were "very satisfied" and added that the technical conversations were entirely devoid of political pressure.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said emphatically that there was no discussion about forming German military units to participate in the proposed European army. The United States wants to organize several West German divisions, but the French government is firmly opposed to the idea.

Public interest in this issue led the National Assembly's foreign affairs committee to vote unanimously today to demand a nonstop debate on German rearmament next Monday. But party leaders were said to favor Tuesday as a starting point.

The majority is expected to back the government's position to any German units, but express varying views on the extent to which German industry may help western Europe build up its defenses.

A major item affecting the French military budget for next year was the United States decision to make 200 million dollars available to France in free currency. The French government originally sought the whole of the 771-million-dollar deficit figured for 1951 in free currency.

French officials said the material aid in arms from the United States had permitted the cancellation of some of the items intended for manufacture here. They said there was a likelihood of Congress increasing the original free currency grant of 200 million dollars after June 30, end of the fiscal year in Washington.

U. S. Reassures Atlantic Pact Partners on French Arms Aid

Treaty organization, directed toward an equitable distribution among all the North Atlantic Treaty members of the economic burdens of the common rearmament effort."

Stripped of its diplomatic language, this was a way of telling the other treaty partners: "Don't worry; we haven't made any promise to the French that cuts into the help you will get from us."

So far none of the treaty embassies here has expressed any concern to the State Department. But to forestall possible criticism from politicians, parliaments or the press in European countries outside France, officials here are considering either a statement by Secretary Acheson of an informal meeting of Ambassadors at which he could explain the meaning of the French-American decisions.

Three Reasons Cited

There were at least three reasons, in the American view, why the French had to get pledges of American help ahead of the 12-nation meeting of Defense Ministers in Washington on October 18.

One reason was the critical parliamentary debate on rearmament which has just begun in the French Assembly. Another was the sudden emergency in Indo-China, where the French abandoned still another frontier post yesterday.

And the third was that the French must begin this week preparing their defense budget for the calendar year 1951.

The French estimated here that they would need the equivalent of 770 million dollars, in addition to American-made military equipment, if they were to put 10 divisions into the field by the end of next year. The Americans suggested that economies could cut this 770 millions figure, and Defense Minister Jules Moch is now back in Paris trying to translate the American suggestions into action.

Meanwhile the Americans have promised to help French defense production to the extent of 200 million dollars before June 30, 1951, with the clear implication that a further installment will come for the last half of 1951 if Congress is willing.

This money would come out of military assistance funds, and would take the form of American orders for French machine tools, building materials and other supplies to speed up the French production of armaments.

The French would get the dollars, and could use them, with American consent, to meet the shortage in their defense budget. But the present Military Assistance Act limits such indirect help, or "offshore procurement," to 475 million dollars for all countries.

Legislation Needed

Another installment of such help for the French, therefore, will have to await new legislation, either in an increase of this 475 million dollar limit or a new authorization of funds, or both.

The 200-million-dollar figure was the only amount specified in the French-American statement. Even this was clearly labeled as short-term, "interim" help. The other promises made to the French were not specific, so far as the official statement disclosed.

In Europe the French know only that they can count on "by far the greatest single part" of the five billion dollars appropriated for military aid in the 1950 and 1951 fiscal years. They knew this before the Defense and Finance Ministers came to Washington. Although they wanted it underlined for domestic political reasons.

In the Far East the French now know that "the major part" of all American military aid will be used for their embattled troops, and those of the associated native states, in Indo-China. They did not know this before the Ministers came here.

The decision on Indo-China represented a quick shift of American priorities, prompted by the Communist victories there, and by a direct appeal from Moch to Defense Secretary Marshall last weekend. From now on, to judge from Tuesday night's statement, Indo-China will have the highest priority in the Far East, and other claimants like the Philippines and Thailand may have to wait for their military help from this country.

Finance Minister Maurice Petsche and his French experts had a final meeting with American officials yesterday. From now on, they agreed, the French rearmament problem could not be discussed or solved separately from that of the other treaty partners.

The details of American military aid to France will have to be worked out by the deputies of the 12 treaty nations, now meeting in London, and later by the defense ministers and foreign ministers of the entire group.

Petsche plans to fly back to Paris today.

Montgomery Democratic Slate Lashed

The Montgomery County Charter Committee yesterday branded most of the candidates on the Democratic Victory slate for county council as "machine-picked."

In a statement to the press, the committee said that election of Democratic Victory candidates "would return Montgomery County to its familiar one-man rule."

Pointed to as the "one man" was E. Brooke Lee, who announced before the September 18 primaries that he was retiring as an active leader of the Democratic Party in the county.

He "is a master of resigning," the statement said. "Three times he has resigned as head of the county political machine, but it has only been to create a front, a cover-up, and that's what we must watch."

In the Democratic primary for four council seats, all candidates indorsed by the Victory Committee won nomination. The charter group is indorsing eight candidates in the November 7 general election—six Republicans and two Democrats.

The Senator was careful to speak of "Soviet Russia" in voicing his criticism.

Dewey Cites FDR's 1928 Race With Raskob Aiding on Debt

charges growing out of the letter, Hanley mentioned the charges only as "a vicious attack on me personally" and then launched into a campaign speech on other issues.

Earlier, United States Representative W. Jingsland Macy—to whom Hanley wrote his now-famous letter—was reported by a newspaper as having tried to use it to high-pressure a Senate candidacy for himself.

At the same time the Democrats called the letter evidence of a felony on Dewey's part and continud to clamor for his removal from office.

The New York World-Telegram and Sun said Macy, Suffolk County GOP leader, threatened to disclose the letter in an effort to force the State Republican Convention to nominate him for the Senate last month.

Macy, a supporter of Hanley for the governorship, and long at odds with Dewey, did not get the nomination. The Hanley letter fell into Democratic hands and finally was made public by Hanley himself on Monday.

Macy would not comment on the report in the World-Telegram and Sun which quoted "unimpeachable Republican sources" as saying:

At the Republican State convention Macy demanded of top GOP leaders that he be nominated for the Senate. He was willing for Dewey to run for a third term as Governor and Hanley for reelection as lieutenant governor.

Then Macy reportedly threatened to reveal the Hanley letter at a conference which Dewey did not attend. A Republican leader was quoted as telling him:

"All right, go ahead and make the letter public and we will tell the story of how you were using the letter."

A copy of the letter appeared at Democratic headquarters about three weeks ago.

Rushing to Macy's defense, his friends said a copy of Hanley's letter was shown at the convention 12 hours before Macy ever received it.

Dewey has denied unqualifiedly that cash or promises of appointment were used to get Hanley to withdraw from the Governor's race.

Representative Walter A. Lynch, Democrat-Liberal candidate for Governor, called for impeachment and prosecution of Dewey, charging that the letter showed he had violated the State criminal code forbidding bartering of public office.

There were these other echoes during the day to the political explosion:

1. In Buffalo, Republican State Chairman William L. Pfeiffer called the Democratic charges "a desperate effort to divert public attention from the shameful scandal in New York City."

In New York, which is heavily Democratic, a Brooklyn grand jury has been probing bookie payoffs to police for protection in gambling operations.'

2. In Washington, the counsel to the Senate campaign investigating committee said John T. McManus of New York City, American Labor candidate for Governor, had asked the committee to look into all circumstances of the letter.

3. In Gouveneur, N. Y., a lawyer said 22 persons had joined in a "Help Hanley" campaign to raise funds for him.

4. The CIO Greater Buffalo industrial council called for a special legislative session before November 7 to impeach Dewey and Hanley.

Lynch, stumping upstate in his campaign for Governor, told his audiences "it was (Dewey) who was responsible for what Hanley has done."

Lynch added:

"I do not hold it against Hanley so much as against the Governor of the State of New York.

"He (Dewey) was willing to sell the (Senate) nomination to Hanley in order that he, himself, might take the nomination for Governor—with eyes only on the Presidency of the United States in 1952.

"I tell you, the letter was revealed because of a goaded conscience by the man who wrote it . . . the letter speaks for itself and it is the blackest and dirtiest page in the political history of New York State."

Longer Transfer Time Asked

The Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association voted unanimously last night to petition the Capital Transit Co. to extend the time during which transfers may be used from one-and-one half to two hours.

In other resolutions the association asked that the Federal payment to the District budget be increased to 40 percent, and that bicycles be registered and licensed in the District.

Seckinger to Advise Commissioners Today On Extending Milk Importation Order Again

District Public Health Director Daniel L. Seckinger today will present his umpteenth recommendation this year on the Washington milk situation.

For the third time in four months the District Commissioners must decide whether to ban milk imported from farms not inspected by the District Health Department. Independent dairies have again requested more time to allow inspection of their farms. They want the deadline extended from October 30 to June 30.

Seckinger, who will meet with the Commissioners, said he would also discuss 10 proposed changes in milk regulations. The changes requested by the independent producers, would make it easier for them to qualify for District permits.

As part of his most recent study of the situation, Seckinger said he was determining the effect on local milk supplies of military personnel. It was the sudden increase in Washington population early in the last war that brought about the order permitting importating of milk from noninspected farms.

Seckinger would not say what his recommendation would be. However, he indicated two weeks ago that he would oppose further extension of the importation order. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West has called importation illegal.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Seybourn H. Lynne ruled Birmingham's Anti-Communist ordinance "null and void and no effect" today and upheld Sam Hall, Alabama chairman of the Communist Party, who asked the courts to bar the city from enforcing the measure.

Attorney John M. Coe of Pensacola, Fla., argued that Hall owns a home in Birmingham and that the ordinance deprives him of the use of his property. Hall, Southern correspondent for the Communist Daily Worker, and his wife have lived in New York since the ordinance was passed last July.

Annexation Court Debate Opens Today

The principals in Alexandria's annexation suit against Fairfax County yesterday completed a two-day tour of the disputed area and prepared to begin, today, their arguments in the case.

The tour, arranged for the three-judge court hearing the suit, covered not only the 7½-square-mile zone Alexandria seeks to acquire, but several heavily populated subdivisions next to the "annexable zone." It was arranged by attorneys for the county, who gave no explanation for showing the court the additional territory.

On Tuesday, opening day of the case, much of the same territory was covered in a trip laid out by attorneys for Alexandria. They said the principal purpose of the tour was to acquaint the jurists with the land in question.

With resumption of the suit slated for today at 10 a. m. in Fairfax Circuit Court, Alexandria will present the first in a chain of witnesses it hopes will uphold the city's contention it needs the added land for industrial expansion.

Judges assigned by the Virginia Supreme Court to hear the annexation proceedings are Paul E. Brown of Fairfax, Jeff Walter of Accomac, and Walter T. McCarthy of Arlington.

Vitamin B-12 Spurs Growth, Dietitians Told

Dramatic speed-up of growth in slow-growing children with minute daily doses of Vitamin B-12 was reported here yesterday.

The complex vitamin, now obtained from wastes in the production of some of the newer antibiotics, has already been reported effective in raising bigger chickens quicker.

Isabel H. Smith, executive director of the Children's Fresh Air Camp and Hospital, Cleveland, described the results with children at the thirty-third annual meeting of the American Dietetic Association, at the National Guard Armory.

She emphasized that the benefits were obtained in cases involving simple growth failure, not where slowness of growth could be ascribed to known bodily disorders.

5 Out of 11 Cases Aided

Miss Smith said the clinical investigation of the vitamin, commonly called the "crimson crystal," was begun in August, 1949, at the Cleveland institution, a "health school for rheumatic, asthmatic and otherwise chronically ill children from middle-class American homes."

Only 11 children, she said, were given the daily oral doses of the vitamin, but in five of these growth "was dramatic." Gains, she reported, were two to three times faster than normal.

One beneficiary, Miss Smith said, was a six-year-old boy who "suffered severe allergic bronchitis, was unable to eat properly, and never slept undisturbed through a single night."

After one week of the test therapy, she told the assembled dietictiations, his symptoms "suddenly disappeared." In eight weeks, she continued, he had passed seven growth levels, in contrast to normal growth of one level a month.

Miss Smith stressed that the one case does not indicate that Vitamin B-12 is "a cure-all for allergic asthmatics."

She said general benefits of the therapy included greatly increased appetites in the children, with their return to normal behavior and alertness. The youngsters, ranging in age from 5 to 12 years (six boys and five girls) were listless and easy to handle before the vitamin administrations.

Became Alert, Naughty

"I must say they became not only more alert, but more normally naughty," she said with a smile.

Vitamin B-12 was first isolated from beef livers several years ago. Because of its scarcity, however, it was of little more than laboratory interest until it was found readily obtainable from the liquors in which streptomycin, and later aureomycin, molds are grown.

Most persons, nutritionists said, get ample amounts of the vitamin in the foods they eat. Where deficiencies occur, individuals may be unable to utilize properly such ordinarily ample supplies, they said.

Some 3600 nutritionists, dietitians and members of allied interests are attending the association convention, which ends Saturday.

Fairland Fair

The annual community fair at Fairland (Md.) School will be held Saturday from 2 p. m. to 9 p. m. at the school. It is sponsored by the P-TA, the citizens association and other community groups.

McKeldin Gets Silent Backing

MOUNT AIRY, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin, Republican candidate for Governor of Maryland and a recognized master in the art of speech-making, acquired a vote without saying a word yesterday.

McKeldin met an old friend, shoemaker Howard Hood, here and spent a few minutes of silence with him. Then the candidate, who's making his third try for the governorship, turned to accompanying newsmen and announced, "He is going to vote for me again."

They had conversed in sign language.

Meantime, it was announced that McKeldin will be heard Thursday night, when Baltimore Democrats stage a big rally on behalf of their State ticket in the general election.

McKeldin won't be there in person.

But the Democrats are going to play a recording of a speech he made in March, 1949. The speech lauded the administration of Governor Lane, who is running for reelection.

"It is a good speech," Lane said today. "I think it is probably one of the best Teddy ever made and everyone should hear it."

Weidemeyer Ruled County Resident

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Charges that C. Maurice Weidemeyer doesn't live in Anne Arundel county, whose State Senator he wants to be, have been rejected.

A special board of registry found the Republican nominee is a legal resident and voter from his cottage near Woodland Beach.

Tydings Gets Time on Lewis' Show to Answer Charges

EASTON, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said today he will take over Fulton Lewis, jr.'s, network broadcast Thursday (7-7:15 p. m. EST) to defend himself against charges the radio commentator had made against him.

He said he had been forced to go to the Federal Communications Commission to get equal Mutual Broadcasting System network time to answer the charges.

In Washington, Lewis said that "if Senator Tydings is correctly quoted that he was forced to go over my head to Mutual network officials and to the FCC to obtain my broadcast time Thursday night, he is guilty of a cheap, deliberate and contemptible lie."

A spokesman for the FCC said "a complaint" was received from Tydings yesterday and was forwarded to Mutual "as is done in such cases." The spokesman said the FCC took no further action.

A Mutual network statement on the affair released in New York said Lewis voluntarily had offered time on his broadcast to Tydings.

The statement said Tydings sent two telegrams and made a telephone call to MBS requesting time from the network.

"While Mutual was still investigating the facts and issues involved," the MBS said, "and before Lewis was informed of the communication received by Mutual from the FCC, Senator Tydings wired Lewis directly and requested an opportunity to debate the matter with Lewis on the air.

"Lewis, on his own volition and with the approval of Mutual, offered to turn over his program to Senator Tydings on Thursday or any night thereafter. Lewis read the request and statements of Senator Tydings in full on his program of Tuesday, October 17, and voluntarily made the offer of time to Senator Tydings."

Lewis has been sharply critical of Senator Tydings' handling of the investigation of charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) that Communists had gained a toehold in the State Department.

Senator Tydings said today he also plans to use Lewis' Friday night network time.

Lewis said that there were no misstatements in his broadcasts about Tydings.

School Patrol Will Tour FBI; Record Is Lauded

Plans for taking the 1200 members of the Montgomery County School Safety Patrol on a tour of the FBI was announced yesterday by Chief of Police Charles M. Orme.

The tours will be made throughout next week, with approximately 240 boys and girls to go each day. Transportation will be furnished by the Board of Education. The tour will be under direction of Sergt. C. O. Seek, Corpl. Gorman Butler and Policeman William DeVries of the county police.

Chief Orme said that since the opening of school no child has been injured or killed at any street crossing or bus covered by patrol, "a record of which we are all proud." The patrol serves 73 county schools.

Vargas May Visit U. S.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Getulio Vargas, winner-apparent of the October 3 presidential election, is preparing to visit the United States shortly after his formal proclamation as president-elect, reliable sources said today.

It's Southern Maryland Fair Time Again—With All Trimmings

By Bob Burchette-The Washington Post

TWO 'FIRST LADIES'—Mrs. William Preston Lane, jr., wife of Maryland's Governor, kisses the Queen of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair at Upper Marlboro yesterday, 17-year-old Sylvia Ferguson, of Meadows, a Frederick Sasscer High School senior

A GOOD TIME is the order of the day here. About 5000 persons showed up as the Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair got under way at Upper Marlboro for a four-day stand. Hundreds of school children, given the day off, trooped to the fair grounds. On the program were cattle, tobacco and vegetable judging and a 1½-hour pageant on a United Nations theme presented by 250 school children. The pageant, entitled "We, the People Speak," was the work of students from Frederick Sasscer and Gwynn Park High Schools. The fair is in its fifty-seventh year. Governor Lane was to have been the guest of honor yesterday, but could not attend

A WINNER—Juanita Fletcher, 16, of Accokeek, Md., holds one of the prize-winning hands of broadleaf tobacco. It was grown by Roger Hyde of Brandywine and was among scores of entries in the tobacco judging at the fair

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutz

Temporary Personnel Will Launch Activities Of Stabilization Agency

The new Federal agency to stabilize prices and wages is beginning to take shape under Administrator Alan Valentine. These are among the temporary appointments that have been made:

H. Graham Morison, Assistant Attorney General, is general counsel; Joseph A. Connor, director of Civil Service's Chicago region, is personnel officer; Carl Blaisdell, a Defense Department official, will handle general services such as space and equipment, and Jack Dolan of the Commerce Department, will be budget director.

In addition, Civil Service has rounded up a small crew of clerks, typists, and stenographers for temporary detail to the agency which has temporary offices on the RFC Building's twelfth floor.

Valentine is the agency's only employe as of now. The others are all on temporary detail and they plan to return to their regular jobs after replacements can be broken in.

The White House is using the same plan in organizing the Economic Stabilization Agency as it used so successfully on ECA. An experienced group of Federal executives who know the ropes are being put into the new agency to get it off to a fast start and then many of them will go back to their regular jobs.

How many employes will the new agency have? The answer could be either 300 or 30,000, depending to what extent prices and wages are controlled. Meantime, the agency will give employment preference to those Federal employes who have either OPA or War Labor Board experience. Its big job is to draft plans that can effectively stabilize both prices and wages. But before any sizable number of employes can be hired office space must be found in which to place them.

SPACE: The Economic Stabilization Agency is merely one of a score of Federal agencies here crying for office space. Space, in fact, is a major headache for General Services Administration, the agency that's supposed to supply it.

GS Administrator Jess Larson said yesterday the agencies are demanding space to house 17,300 defense workers, or about 1,600,000 square feet. He estimated not more than 500,000 feet could be made available in private buildings here.

This means that many new workers will be jammed in space now available, with smaller working quarters for most Federal people here.

HOLIDAY: The next holiday in Government is Armistice Day, November 11. But since it falls on Saturday, it will be a day off for only those employes whose regular work day falls on Saturday.

Incidentally, any number of persons have challenged my note here the other day that Thanksgiving will be on November 23. That's correct even though your calendar may have Thanksgiving as November 30.

APPOINTMENT: One of special interest is that of William T. Golden, New York investment banker and former Atomic Energy official, to be consultant to Budget Director Fred Lawton. Golden will advise on scientific research in the defense agencies, and on scientific activities generally during the emergency period.

CIO: Its non-Communist Government workers union will push legislation in Congress for a wide-scale recreation program for Federal employes here. Senator Langer (R., N. D.) has agreed to sponsor it.

WCC: War Claims Chairman Dan Cleary yesterday did his good deed. Viola Gardner, a WCC stenographer, resigned last week to become secretary to Municipal Court Judge Emory Smith. Several days later the justice suddenly dropped dead. Miss Gardner yesterday got a call from Chairman Cleary and an invitation to return to her old job.

The case of Richard M. Strong, 22, Marine officer candidate and student lawyer, charged with kneeing a traffic policeman last July, was continued for one week yesterday.

And thereby hangs a tale that had Municipal Court officials jumping for two hours.

First, the policeman complained that he had been "put in the middle" when he was asked if he was sure he wanted to press charges.

Then, court was mysteriously adjourned after Judge Ellen K. Raedy received a scribbled note of warning, marked "fireworks," from an assistant United States attorney.

The entry on the official court paper was at variance with the entry recorded by the prosecutor and the disposition report filed by the policeman.

And the official court record of the case temporarily vanished.

Starts on July 4

The story starts on July 4 at the northeast corner of 13th and E sts. nw., at 8 p. m., when Strong started across 13th st. against a red light and was stopped by Police Pvt. E. E. Proudfoot.

At the northwest corner of 13th and E, Strong grabbed Proudfoot by the shoulders, pulled him forward violently, and kneed him in the groin in full view of hundreds on their way to see July 4 fireworks, according to the formal charges.

Proudfoot spent four days in Emergency Hospital. An operation was considered. He spent three more weeks on sick leave.

After a summer of continuances while Strong was in Marine officer candidate school at Quantico, Va., the case came up for trial yesterday.

Both in Courtroom

The case was called, and both men entered the courtroom. In a few minutes, Proudfoot reappeared, and in response to reporters' questions, he said:

"They let him forfeit $50 collateral."

"He's under $300 bond," Proudfoot was told. "How can he forfeit collateral?"

"I don't know. All I know the judge told me this guy was studying to be a lawyer and a Marine lieutenant, and that a conviction would make it impossible," the officer replied.

"She said she didn't want to do anything before talking to me, but they already had me in the middle.

"I don't want to hurt anybody. I feel sorry for the guy. I tried to be an Army officer myself once and I know it's tough, but I don't want any young kid hurting me, either.

"According to everyone talking, nobody wants me to prosecute this guy. The judge says 'All right, then. That's $50 and forfeited."

Explanation Sought

Reporters rushed for an explanation to Assistant United States Attorneys Warren Wilson and Thomas Wadden. Wadden listened to the story, and left quickly for Judge Raedy's courtroom.

When reporters got back to the courtroom, Judge Raedy was in her chambers. She told reporters they were misinformed. She had not allowed the man to forfeit collateral, she said. She had continued the case a week for further investigation.

Reporters rushed back to check records. On the Strong dossier in the possession of Prosecutor Alfred Hantman was the penciled notation "Guilty, $50 collateral forfeit."

In the liaison office, where all policemen are required to note the disposition of their cases, the Strong file was found. It said "Disposition: Forfeit $50. E. E. Proudfoot."

Papers Not Available

Where were the official papers, charging Strong? Myron G. Ehrlich, Strong's lawyer, took them from the court, Hantman said. Judge Raedy's clerk did not have the papers.

Neither did the financial clerk.

Neither did any other clerk for almost an hour. Then they reappeared.

"Case continued for one week," was the only notation.

When Ehrlich was asked about the disposition of the case, he said "the guy didn't have the $50. The case was continued for one week, that's all."

No one at court would say whether the session next Wednesday would be to try Proudfoot's charges or to collect collateral.

General Falls Off Ferry Into Potomac

The fog which closed down local airports yesterday morning also played havoc with Air Force marine navigation and resulted in a major general's falling into the Potomac River.

Gen. Everest

One of the boats which ferry personnel from Bolling Air Force Base to the lagoon near the Pentagon every morning ran into a mudbank off the National Airport with 25 officers and men aboard, including several general officers.

In response to an SOS from the crew, another boat was sent from Bolling and picked up the stranded mariners.

However, as the second boat nosed through the fog in search of the Pentagon Lagoon entrance, Maj. Gen. Frank F. Everest, assistant deputy chief of staff for Air Force operations, lost his balance and went overboard.

A crewman, Sergt. Charles M. French, jr. 27 who was wearing a lifejacket as required by regulations jumped over to assist the general. A good swimmer, General Everest kept afloat on his own and was quickly pulled into the boat.

A third boat took the dripping officer to the Pentagon for a dry change.

D. C. May Get Tiny Taste Of That Hurricane Today

The hurricane in Florida is "likely" to bring Washington some rain tonight.

The Weather Bureau forecasts a cloudy, mild day with a high of 74 degrees, doubts the city will get more than tail-end effects from the Florida storm.

Washington yesterday had an unpleasant weather condition of its own—fog.

It made driving conditions dangerous in the early morning and "stacked" planes over National Airport from 12:01 a. m. to 10:19 a. m.

It also forced a change in landing the Presidential plane. "The Independence."

School Board Bars Mixed Race Groups

'No Intermingling' In School Hours; Anacostia Action Approved 5 to 3

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The District Board of Education yesterday interpreted the segregated school law to mean that white and Negro mixed groups cannot appear in schools during school hours.

By a 5-to-3 vote board members ruled that school officials acted properly when they refused a mixed group of Sesquicentennial actors permission to present scenes from "Faith of Our Fathers" on the stage of the white Anacostia High School.

Five white members of the board voted to support school officials. The three Negro members dissente. Board President C. Melvin Sharpe did not cast a vote.

Sharpe "Interprets" Ruling

After the meeting, Dr. Hobart M. Corning, school superintendent, said he did not know how far-reaching the decison would be. The action raised the question whether Dr. Corning will be able to visit Negro schools.

Sharpe said he interpreted it to mean "no intermingling" of Negroes and whites.

The board adopted two recommendations presented by a special committee appointed to look into the "Anacostia incident" and to draw up a policy for the guidance of school officials in "future instances."

The majority report was presented by Adelbert W. Lee, chairman of the committee. Dr. James A. Gannon concurred. Woolsey W. Hall, only Negro member of the committee, submitted a minority report.

Hall Urges Legal Advice

Other board members who joined Lee and Gannon in voting for the majority report were Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger and Albert E. Steinem. Dr. Phillip Johnson, Mrs. Velma Williams and Hall voted against the report.

The first recommendation indorsed the action of school officers. The second, the so-called "policy motion," said the board shall "obey the law in its specific instructions and in its spirit."

In the minority report, Hall urged the board to consult "competent legal guidance" rather than interpret the law itself.

Hall said there had been "many instances of general citizen use of public school property without resultant confusion."

During World War II a draft board for two years occupied offices in Central High School "with interracial clerical personnel, where draftees of all races and creeds were coming and going from 8 in the morning to 8 at night without untoward incident," Hall said.

In support of the recommendation, Dr. Gannon declared that Mrs. Opal Corkery, principal of Anacostia, "did a fine thing for the city" when she refused the actors permission to appear.

Dr. Gannon referred to a report of Dr. Corning that the play was banned because of student objection to the presence of Negroes in the school.

"That spark might have set off a racial war," Dr. Gannon said.

Dr. Johnson said "there will be disorder only if we invite it." He said he had witnessed race riots in Washington, adding:

"I see others if we proceed in the way we are trying to proceed now. This is a very bitter question to my people."

Opening of Marlboro Fair Attracts 5000; Queen Crowned

The opening of the fifty-seventh annual Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair yesterday was highlighted by the crowning of the Queen of the Fair by Mrs. William Preston Lane, jr., wife of Maryland's Governor.

Pinch-hitting for her husband, who was campaigning on the Eastern Shore for reelection. Mrs. Lane placed the crown on the brunette tresses of the 17-year-old Sylvia Ferguson of Meadows. The queen is a senior at Frederick Sasscer High School, Marlboro.

Governor Lane's place at the head of the table at the Governor's Day luncheon at the Marlboro Fair Grounds was filled by Joseph R. Byrnes, president of the State Senate.

An estimated 5000 persons watched a pageant honoring the fifth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations. It was presented by 250 county school pupils.

The 1½-hour pageant, entitled "We, the People Speak," included songs and dances of the various member nations of the U. N. The narrative was given by Robert Downing, jr., 15, of Nottingham, a junior at Frederick Sasscer High School.

Participating in the pageant were students of Frederick Sasscer and Gwynn Park High Schools and Marlboro and Brandywine Elementary Schools.

Ex-Diplomat Critically Hurt In Auto Crash

Major Julius Wadsworth, 48, sculptor and former diplomat, was critically injured yesterday in a two-car collision on Route 1, a mile north of Richmond.

Doctors at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital said Major Wadsworth suffered multiple injuries.

State police said he was a passenger in an auto driven by Mrs. Margaret Miller, 53, of 208 Raymond st., Chevy Chase, Md., who suffered fractured ribs and a severe laceration of the head. Her condition was listed as satisfactory.

Police said Mrs. Miller was driving north and was trying to turn off the highway when her car collided with a southbound auto occupied by two Marines.

The Marines were identified as James Nalland, 26, Westenport, Md., and Ernest Metcalf, 22, Camp Lejeune, N. C. Doctors said Nalland suffered a fractured shoulder and a facial fracture and Metcalf suffered a possible brain injury. Both were taken to Fort Lee Station Hospital.

Major Wadsworth, who lives at 2304 Massachusetts ave. nw., was forced by ill health to give up a promising diplomatic career in 1939. During World War II, he served in Army Military Intelligence.

He has been a sculptor for the past four years and recently executed a memorial tablet for his ancestral home in Middletown, Conn.

An active reserve officer, he is a director of the Military Government Association and president of its Washington chapter. He also is executive vice chairman of the Greater Washington Citizens' Committee for Government Reorganization.

Friends of Mrs. Miller said she left home Monday and was expected back last night.

Driver Guilty In Death of Jacob Gruver

Kegham Patchadjian, 41, was convicted of negligent homicide yesterday, as a result of the January traffic death of Jacob S. Gruver, prominent District banker.

Patchadjian was found guilty by Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott, after a 2½ day trial. Judge Scott tried the case without a jury.

Imposition of sentence was continued until October 25.

Assistant United States Attorney Frank H. Strickler, who prosecuted the case, said that Patchadjian was traveling south on Connecticut ave. at 8:30 p. m., January 25, when he struck Gruver and his sister as they were walking across the avenue at Livingston st.

The sister, Mrs. Grace G. Irvin, 74, 5425 Connecticut ave. nw., was so seriously injured in the accident that she was unable to attend the trial, Strickler said.

Patchadjian, who lives at 1508 Madison st., Hyattsville, Md., testified that the defendants walked out from between parked cars 50 feet from the Livingston st. intersection.

Civil Defense Haste Hit by Gen. Young

Volunteers Need Clear-Cut Tasks, He Says, to Retain Their Enthusiasm

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, warned last night that hasty organization of civil-defense volunteers could spell loss of enthusiasm as time goes on and seriously endanger the program.

"We must remember," he told some 500 members of the Washington Board of Trade, "that we are setting up a volunteer organization which must go on and on and on, perhaps for years, perhaps for decades."

Rightly or wrongly, he said, the Commissioners' policy has been to refrain from action which might be "of some limited use if a crisis developed immediately, but in the long run would work serious harm."

General Young advocated orderly organization of civil defense "as fast as we are prepared to assign clear-cut and sensible tasks" which can be understood and carried out systematically, not only in the immediate future, but "patiently and progressively over a long period."

Police Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting director of civil defense, told the meeting at the Statler Hotel that the need now is to train the organization so as to utilize the volunteers intelligently when the time comes.

George E. Sokolsky, columnist and radio commentator, said that sooner or later we shall have war in the Philippines and Iran. Our problem is no longer politics, but a "retreat to morality" and principles, he said.

Col. C. M. Boyer, assistant to the executive director of the Reserve Officers Association, urged businessmen to drop what he termed "short-sighted policies of refusing to employ reserves."

Overseas Servicemen Exempted From Alexandria Ban on Dogs

Overseas servicemen's families who live in Alexandria housing developments and who keep dogs may continue to do so without fear of eviction, the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority said yesterday.

Their dog-owning neighbors whose husbands or fathers are not servicemen overseas will be evicted November 1 if they don't get rid of their pets by that date, under an order issued by the authority.

A statement by E. F. Ticer, chairman of the authority, pointed out that the servicemen's families are protected by the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act, and said no action is planned in such cases until the servicemen return.

The anti-dog order, first issued by the authority on July 1, and the eviction threat have resulted in attempts by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) the Alexandria City Council, and Army and Navy authorities to find a way out for protesting dog owners. A number of tenants are employed or attached to the Naval Torpedo Station in Alexandria and nearby Fort Belvoir.

The number of dog owners at the eight Alexandria housing projects has been reduced from 550 to 33 since July 1, according to the statement, and some of the 33 have arranged for homes for their pets.

The authority chairman said the large dog population in the projects—including 12 owned by one family—brought a "tremendous volume" of complaints which forced the authority to act.

The public housing projects contain 1151 dwelling units. Most of those affected by the order live at the Chinquapin Village and Cameron Valley developments.

Rotary's Executive Secretary Honored for 25 Years' Service

The Washington Post

"SERVICE ABOVE SELF"—Mrs. Ethel Ward, executive secretary of the Washington Rotary Club, was honored for her 25 years service to the club. She was presented with a $2500 check, one hundred dollars for each year. George Muth, past president, makes the presentation

Four hundred of Washington's busiest business and professional men and their wives took three hours off at midday yesterday to honor the Rotary Club's 65-year-old executive secretary.

It was an occasion of much joy and some tears from the moment the slight wisp of a woman was escorted to the head table to the tune of "The Old Gray Mare" and the words "Little Ethel Ward is better than she used to be, better than she used to be twenty-five years ago."

In her executive position, Mrs. Ward has been a mainstay of the club and confidante on personal problems to "my boys," meaning some of the city's leading businessmen, since she came with Rotary in 1925.

There was an Aladdin's bag of gifts, tokens of her "boys'" appreciation at the Mayflower luncheon.

Included were a check for $2500, another for $610 "and more on the way"—the overflow from the original $100 for each year planned as gift.

But the main present lay in the hearts of the Rotarians for Mrs. Ward's 25 years as a living epitome of the club's dictum: "Service Above Self."

Rotarian after Rotarian arose to pay tribute to the little lady wearing the white orchid. Telegrams and letters poured in from across the Nation.

Her eyes wet and bright, Mrs. Ward looked much younger than her years: "It's the work," she said. "You never get bored in Rotary."

Washington-born, Mrs. Ward attended Business High School here, eloping in her last year to marry J. Paul Ward. They live at 1857 Monroe st. nw.

Contractor Fatally Injured In Fall Under His Bulldozer

William C. Viar, a Fairfax County installation contractor, died yesterday of injuries he received two hours earlier when he fell from and was run over by a bulldozer.

Viar, 44, was cutting pine pilings on the Gunston, Va., property of John Haislop, police said. Assisted by James E. Gorham, 35, of Route 5, Alexandria, Viar had cut one tree which fell against another. Operating his bulldozer on a steep grade, Viar tried to work the dangling tree loose.

When the tree began falling, Viar leaped for safety, fell under the bulldozer and was crushed.

He died at 12:50 p.m. in Alexandria Hospital.

Born in Albemarle County, Va., Viar came to the Alexandria area in 1928. Until two years ago he operated a riding academy in Groveton. He had two show horses of his own which he exhibited regularly, both jumpers.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rowena Wood Viar and two sons, David G. and Claude M., both of Groveton. Services will be held Friday afternoon at the Groveton Baptist Church. Burial will be in Mount Comfort Cemetery.

Final Rites Friday For Miss Carrie Shreve

Funeral services for Miss Carrie May Shreve, who died Tuesday at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, will be at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., on Friday at 10 a. m.

Miss Shreve, only daughter of the late William Oliver and Ida Elizabeth Shreve, was a lifelong resident of the District of Columbia. Born February 6, 1879, in Washington, she was educated in the public schools and was a member of Ruth Chapter, No. 1, OES, and Calvary Baptist Church.

Her father, as a partner in the firm of William O. Shreve & Sons, established in 1861, was one of the pioneer wholesale fruit and produce commission dealers of this city.

FCC Orders NBC to Limit TV Color Broadcasts

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission ordered the National Broadcasting Co. yesterday to stop color television broadcasts using the RCA color system during regular commercial hours.

NBC, affiliate of Radio Corp. of America, has been making such telecasts over stations WNBT in New York and WNBW in Washington for the past year.

Some of these broadcasts have included regular commercial shows, and had a two-fold objective—to further the development of the RCA color system and to impress upon the public the fact it is "compatible" with present black and white operations. It is compatible in that owners of outstanding sets received these colorcasts in black and white without making any adjustment on their sets.

The action against NBC yesterday was in response to a request for an extension of authority, for 90 days, for the RCA colorcasts on WNBW and WNBT. NBC also asked if a charge might be made for its color television programs.

The commission replied by granting a 90-day extension of experimental broadcasts in color over the two stations but specified these broadcasts would have to be carried on strictly as experimental operations and hence could not be included in "normal broadcasting hours." This means any future color broadcasting in RCA color would have to be either before or after the regular daily schedule of commercial operations.

The commission said the company will also have to use special experimental call letters on the air instead of the regular station identifications and it may not charge for any RCA color television program.

In granting the extension of time, the commission called attention to the fact that when it selected CBS as the official system, it did not close the door on further color experiments by others, or possible future adoption of some other color system if there were compelling reasons to do so.

Under the FCC order, WNBW must drop its colorcasts from commercial hours on October 23 and WNBT will have to follow suit November 1.

The FCC also said yesterday it will vigorously fight the court actions which have been started against its recent color television decision.

Pilot Radio Corp., RCA and NBC on Tuesday filed suits in the Federal courts at New York and Chicago. They asked for injunctions to upset the FCC selection of Columbia Broadcasting System's color plan as the Nation's official color television method.

In its first formal statement on this challenge, FCC said:

"The commission will vigorously oppose the issuance of any injunctive to either Pilot or RCA-NBC."

The suits alleged that the color decision would cause "irreparable injury" to the public, manufacturers and broadcasters because present TV sets could not get the Columbia color signals even in black and white without the purchase of an adapting device.

The FCC yesterday called attention, in connection with one of the RCA complaints, to the fact it had publicly announced last January the development in its own laboratories of a device which fits in with the CBS system. RCA asserted in its suit that the decision in favor of Columbia was influenced by a commission engineer who invented and patented such a device. He was not named in the court action.

The January anouncement said Edwin W. Chapin and Willmar K. Roberts, chief and assistant chief respectively of FCC's laboratory division, had developed an automatic adapter under which existing television sets could tune in both regular black and white broadcasts and the CBS color system. The announcement emphasized the invention had been assigned to the United States Government, as represented by the FCC, which held authority over its use.

The announcement said FCC had given permission to CBS to build and test the adapter, and had waived the payment of royalties to the Government for a temporary six-months period.

The adapter was demonstrated at one of the official tests of competing color television systems early this year.

Mutual Funds Sales, Assets Set New Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sales of "mutual funds," a form of investment which has become popular in Washington during the past two years, reached a new high in the first nine months.

Sales of new shares amounted to $383,439,000 during the period while net sales, after redemptions, were $185,477,000, according to the National Association of Investment Companies.

Total net assets of 98 mutual funds on September 30 were $2,354,340,000, an increase of $380,793,000 over December 31, 1949, and $599,180,000 since September 30, 1949.

The report covers all the open-end or mutual fund members of the association but does not include the closed-end members. Closed-end investment companies do not continuously offer shares to the public and their outstanding securities are listed on stock exchanges or traded in the open market.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY: L. Bert Nye, resident vice president of the American Surety, tomorrow will complete 50 years of service with his company and the surety and insurance business in Washington. He has another distinction—for 30 consecutive years he has attended every annual convention of the D. C. Bankers Association. Nye, a native of Washington, is active in the business life of the city and is a former president of the Rotary Club.

HEADS FOOD CHAIN: John A. Logan of Washington was elected president of the National Association of Food Chains as the organization concluded its three-day annual meeting yesterday in Cincinnati. Logan has already served 12 years as president of the group which he joined in 1934 as executive vice president. The association is comprised of more than 200 American, Canadian and Mexican food chain companies.

RAIL REVENUES: The Association of American Railroads estimated that railroad operating revenues last month were 21.2 percent above September, 1949. The estimate was based on advance reports from the large carriers. These indicated a rise of 24.5 percent in freight revenues and an increase of 6.8 percent in passenger revenues for September 1950.

WHO'S NEWS: Col. Miles H. Knowles has been appointed vice president of U. S. Radiator Corp. in charge of its defense production activities and with offices in Washington. . . . William DeBruin of Washington will attend a two-week training course of the Ford Merchandising School in Dearborn, Mich. . . . Lawrence P. The Southeastern Group includes Washington investment bankers.

CONCEPT: George and John Hartford's success with the A & P Food Stores chain is based on a simple business concept, according to Carl Byoir. This is to give the public the lowest price possible and at the lowest profit possible. Byoir, chairman of the board of Carl Byoir & Associates, national public relations firm, spoke at a luncheon meeting Tuesday of the Advertising Club of Washington in the Statler. In addition to the A. & P. Byoir's firm represents other large corporations. Byoir also criticized the Government's antitrust action against A. & P.

Mack Resigns After Managing A's for 50 Years

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

AT BALTIMORE on Saturday, Southern California and Navy will be playing a football game that could be called the Hungry Bowl. They are both famished for some kind of a victory this season and that novel experience could happen to either one, barring a tie.

Like the Navy, the Trojans haven't licked anybody yet. They dropped that stunner to a low-rated Iowa team in the opener, managed to tie Washington State, 20-20, and then got themselves bumped off by California. But Navy folks are naturally suspicious of a Southern California team that could hold California to 13-7.

Povich

In fact, the Trojans were thinking they were going to win that one from California and knock the Pacific Coast Conference ratings cockeyed. Thirty seconds from the finish, they had a first down on California's 1-yard line, and were dreaming of victory.

That was the trouble. Sophomore Quarterback Ed Demirjian dreamed the Trojans right out of the ball game on what should have been the touchdown play. You might say their chances of winning were beautifully executed.

ON THE PLAY, Fullback Ralph Pucci pounded into the right side of the California line and with such force he almost wound up in the box seats. "I was astounded to discover I did not have the ball," said Fullback Pucci later.

The play called for Pucci to take it, but somehow Quarterback Demirjian wound up with the ball himself and was thrown for an 8-yard loss back to the 9 when the play was over. The final whistle caught the Trojans on the California 3, and in the dressing room the heart-broken Demirjian could merely explain: "I simply forgot to give Pucci the ball."

Mr. Bob Smith, the Trojans' advance man who is helping drum up trade for Navy vs. Southern California, suggests that the Trojans' attack is so tricky it sometimes confuses their own players. Jess Cravath, their coach, has four different offensive systems—two off the double wings, plus a T and a split-T.

"WHEN FRANK GIFFORD made that 15-yard quarterback sneak to a TD against Washington State," Smith relates, "everybody including the officials lost track of the ball. Gifford was the only man running anywhere."

Southern California had a horrible time of it getting that 20-20 tie with Washington State, incidentally, or so relates Smith. "Our boys were in the stands watching on that day when UCLA beat Washington State, 42 to 0, and figured it would be a breeze for them the following week. In that frame of mind, they were soon trailing Washington State 20-0, and had to scare up the tying points in the last 10 minutes."

Cravath's team is loaded with backs, without much in the line, Smith says. "California threw only two passes against us. They found out we were so easy to run against, I guess. Navy will find that out, too, I suppose. Cravath says he could take our freshman line and varsity backs and get into the Rose Bowl with 'em."

Among the Trojans' backs is Sol Naumu, one of their four Hawaiian players. He now plays left half, though a bit incapacitated by a broken hand. "Funny thing," Smith observes, "all of our Hawaiians have come up with bone-breaks of some kind. They tell me that Hawaiians don't drink milk, and it makes for a lack of lime substance that invites broken bones."

DEMIRJIAN, who alternates with Gifford in quarterbacking the Trojans, starred at Muir Junior College, and was all but lost to UCLA when he graduated. In fact, he was about to register at UCLA when the Southern California people got to his father and explained the advantages of their law school.

"Better go to Southern California, son," his daddy finally told the player. "You want to be a lawyer, and they tell me that all the judges in California are Southern California graduates. You might never win a case if you go to UCLA.

The Trojans lost out in the bidding, though, for Bob Cameron, the California boy who is now a Navy quarterback. "We could offer him just as good an education," moaned Cravath, "but Navy apparently tossed in a battleship and we couldn't match that."

YOU'RE THE BOSS, JIMMY—Connie Mack (right), who retired as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics baseball club, whispers in ear of his successor, Jimmy Dykes, after surrendering reins to Dykes yesterday

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Dykes Succeeds 87-Year-Old Boss

By Lee Linder and Orlo Robertson

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18 (AP).—Connie Mack, baseball's grand old man," resigned today after 50 years as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

And into his shoes as manager stepped Jimmy Dykes, 54, star third baseman of the Athletics when Connie Mack's team dominated the baseball picture two decades ago.

At the same time, Art Ehlers, 52, director of the American League club's baseball farm system, was elevated to the position of general manager.

Although the lanky 87-year-old leader of the Athletics had been under fire for some time by sports fans as having outlived his usefulness, his resignation came as a surprise.

"I am retiring from the active management of the baseball club but will remain as a director," Mack said.

Actually, he'll retain the office of president, with his oldest son Roy, vice president, and another son, Earle, secretary-treasurer.

Roy and Earle own all of the stock except that in possession of their father. They purchased the stock from Connie Mack, jr., a half-brother, and the Shibe interests last month as the culmination of a bitter argument within the organization.

Mack became manager of the Athletics when the American League was organized in 1901. A major league catcher in the early days of the sport, Mack directed the Athletics to nine American League pennants and five world championships.

But since the Athletics lost to the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1931 series, they have failed to come through. They finished second the following year and since then have wound up in the first division only twice, in 1933 and 1948.

Mack had hoped to celebrate his golden anniversary of managing with a pennant in 1950 and then announce his retirement but the team's pitching fell apart and found itself mired in the second division. It finished a badly beaten last.

After announcing the appointment of Dykes and Ehlers, Mack added:

"And all news concerning the Athletics will come from either Ehlers or Dykes. They will have complete charge of the club and all help possible will be given them toward producing a pennant winning team."

While the announcement came as a surprise, the Mack family apparently had been sitting on the idea every since Earle and Roy obtained control of the club.

There were rumors "Mr. Baseball" would step down but these were repeatedly denied by Mack himself and Roy. Most persistent of the rumors were that Lou Boudreau, manager of the Cleveland Indians, would succeed Connie and that Dykes would not return next year.

Asked when his father decided to leave the dugout, Roy replied:

"That was several weeks ago. Since then Earle and I have been

'Pop-Up' Timid

Dykes Says Job Is 'Too Big for Me'

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18 (AP).—Old "Pop Up" Jimmy Dykes took over as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics today and told reporters he was "flabbergasted" over his selection.

But the appointment didn't make Jimmy speechless. It's doubtful if anything can do that.

The cigar-smoking, wise-cracking Dykes is nearly as familiar to Shibe Park fandom as the man he succeeded, 87-year-old Connie Mack.

Now 52, Dykes was only 20 when he made his first appearance with the Athletics. He played third base for Mack from 1918 through 1932 when he was sold to the Chicago White Sox.

Dykes managed the Sox until 1946 and was out of baseball briefly until Mack rehired him as a coach two years later.

"I started as a fresh kid when I broke into baseball," Dykes observed today, "but I've always had the highest respect for Mr. Mack, who is the game's greatest individual."

Dykes went on:

"I am flabbergasted about my appointment. Stepping into the shoes of a man who has run the club for 50 years is a job that is too big for me, too big for any man.

"I am not afraid of being a manager. I have been through all that before, but I am afraid in following in the footsteps of Mr. Mack and carrying out his ideas."

The club Dykes inherited is a pitcherless, demoralized team that finished a poor last in the season just completed. Jimmy, however, is no stranger to weak teams. His White Sox teams were perennial second division outfits.

Dykes was asked if he had signed a contract.

"Contract?" he exclaimed. "What's what?"

"I don't even know I'm going to get one," he added.

Dykes was asked then if he was going to get a salary increase.

"Your guess is as good as mine. I'm going to manage the club. That's enough salary for me."

'Nobody Will Take His Place,' Griff Says

"I'm pleased," said Clark Griffith when informed Connie Mack had stepped down. "I think it's a good thing he's quitting. He's the greatest man in baseball, and he's done more for it than anyone else."

"That traveling was wearing him down," Griffith said. "I'd tried to get him to quit several years ago, but he said 'I like to travel.'

"I said, 'Well, I don't. I've been traveling since I was 17 years old and I've had enough of it.'"

When a reporter suggested that Griff might now step up as baseball's grand old man, he was told:

Virginia Tells Reasons It Violates Code

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—The University of Virginia and the National Collegiate Athletic Association still are poles apart on agreement with the "sanity code," and University President Colgate W. Darden told why today.

"Our athletic scholarships are awarded and paid by alumni," he said, "rather than by 'the regular agency established in the recipient's institution for granting aid to all students,'" as provided in the code.

One of several colleges on the NCAA's "black list" for violations of the code, Virginia allows books, room and board which are not institutional fees, Darden pointed out.

He said university officials "are not now and never have been" in non-compliance with the basic objectives of the code or of the NCAA.

Alumni contributions to athletics last year amounted to "less than $32,000, to provide scholarships," Darden said. He added that $26,894.50 went to football players.

In his report Darden broke down scholarship aid as follows:

"There were eight scholarships of $1040 each, three of $840, and 12 others for smaller amounts ranging from $450 downward. . . . No other money was paid to players from any source so far as we know."

The president said it was impossible for a University of Virginia student to play football, earn enough money to pay his own way and, at the same time, do acceptable academic work. He asserted:

"Any rule requiring a student to pay his way by his own earnings at ordinary rates of pay will, here at least, result in his being required to leave the university because of his inability to do the work required, or in his perpetrating a fraud with the assistance of those in authority."

If the NCAA rule is amended, as Darden hopes, he said he will "urge the retention of our membership and our faithful adherence to the code."

And He Played Horses Too

Tough as Rawhide—Gentle as a Mother; Reasonable—Obstinate: That Was Mack

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (NYHT).—In the winter of 1883 a skinny young cobbler's assistant who hated cobbling shoved his catcher's glove into his pocket—it was a kid glove, skin tight, with the fingers cut off—and went out through the snows of New England and got a job as a professional baseball player with Meriden, of the Connecticut State League. He knew then, of course, that the career he was starting would have to end some day.

Red Smith

Throughout his 65 years in baseball, Connie Mack has been aware that the day of departure must inevitably arrive. So has everybody else. But those who have known also that when the time did come it would come as a shock. It came today. It was a shock.

A shock, but not a surprise, for it is not exactly a secret that Connie will be 88 years old on December 23. The only surprise regarding his retirement as manager of the Athletics stems from the appointment of Jimmy Dykes as his successor, instead of Connie's son, Earle. For years Connie insisted that Earle, and Earle alone, would succeed him.

Only a week ago there was a story out of Philadelphia suggesting that Dykes was through with the Athletics and it quoted Connie thus: "I hope Jimmy finds something good, real good."

So now Jimmy has found something, but how good it is remains to be seen. He is manager of a bad ball team with a barren farm system and a financial future that is a topic of wide speculation because Earle Mack and his brother, Roy, went in hock to buy the club.

FOR ONE who traveled with Connie Mack for 10 seasons, it would require at least 10 years to tell about this glorious old guy who has been baseball's high priest and patriarch, one of its keenest minds, its priceless ambassador, one of its sharpest businessmen, certainly its most indestructible myth.

The plaster saint that they made of him in his

Louis Signs For Brion

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (AP).—Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis, trying a comeback from a comeback that failed, is going to nail 'em early henceforth. That includes champion Ezzard Charles, if and when they meet again.

The long trail back begins at Chicago Stadium November 29 when Louis meets Argentine Cesar Brion whose 10-round bout with the Brown Bomber was announced today.

Joe plans "three or four" fights before challenging Charles for a re-match.

"I have thought it over and now I think I can beat Charles," said Louis. He added:

"From now on, I'm goin' out right after the other guy and nail him like I used to."

Reminded that he might not meet Charles again until next June and would then be a year older, 36-year-old Louis came back quick as a flash with:

"So will Charles."

Barclay Gets New Contract

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Head football coach George Barclay was given a new two-year contract today at Washington and Lee University.

President Francis P. Gaines said a recent recommendation of the University's Athletic Council to renew Barclay's original two-year pact had been approved unanimously by the university board of trustees. The new contract calls for an undisclosed salary increase.

Barclay's work in revitalizing the Generals' football fortunes has been praised roundly by students, alumni and the university staff.

This year's eleven is tied for the Southern Conference leadership, although a heart-breaking loss to Virginia last Saturday halted its consecutive victory skein. The Generals thus far have defeated Furman, West Virginia and The Citadel.

Barclay's 1949 team, the first he coached here, finished third in the conference with a 3-1-1 record, including a 21-19 loss to George Washington and a tie with Virginia Tech.

Gordon to Pilot Sacramento

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 18 (AP).—Joe Gordon, veteran second baseman of the Cleveland Indians, will manage the Sacramento Solons next year, Solon general manager Jo-Jo White announced today.

White said he has reached an agreement with the 34-year-old Gordon for a two-year contract.

Gordon will succeed Joe Marty. Marty took over in midseason from Ralph "Red" Kress. The Solons finished in the PCL cellar.

Class B Richmond Will Serve as Affiliate to Nats

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Class B Piedmont League Richmond Colts today announced a working agreement with the Washington Senators.

In the first deal in the transaction, Washington announced that Outfielder Alex Driscoll would be shipped to Richmond. Driscoll will be optioned by Chattanooga, the Senators' Southern Association farm team.

Justice Will Wear Familiar No. 22 Sunday

Charlie Justice will get to wear his favorite number 22 with the Redskins.

Halfback Harry Dowda, who has worn jersey No. 22 for the past two years, yesterday gave the number to All-America Charlie and Dowda, in return, was assigned No. 44, the uniform number he wore at Wake Forest.

Justice wore No. 22 at North Carolina for four years. Until Dowda turned over the number yesterday, Justice was wearing No. 24 with the Redskins.

Packers Tackle Yanks Tonight

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—The first-place New York Yanks, led by Ace Quarterback George Ratterman, will meet an improved Green Bay Packers eleven at Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

The game will not be televised in Washington.

New York and the Chicago Bears top the National Conference of the National Football League with a 4-1 record while Green Bay is fifth at 2-3.

He Fools Terps as Well as Foes

Shemonski Is Unpredictable

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

If the Maryland football coaches had the slightest idea of what Robert Peter Shemonski was going to do against North Carolina State Saturday, they wouldn't feel so uneasy about the Terps' homecoming affair as they pretended to be yesterday.

Bob Shemonski

Every time the 20-year-old halfback gets the ball he gives Coach Jim Tatum and his assistants an acute case of the screaming meamies. Sometimes he does it even without the ball.

He's about the most unpredictable thing that's hit the football field in many a year. His coaches don't know what to expect of him—except that he runs like a frightened deer—but they shouldn't feel too alarmed because Shemonski himself admits he hasn't the slightest idea of what he's going to do next.

"It comes to me like that," he explains with a snap of his fingers, "and I just do it. That's all there is to it."

The one-time tailback of the Archbald, Pa., Red Rams showed he wasn't the ordinary type of player on the first day of practice with the Maryland frosh three years ago. The coach had warned the squad about several holes in the field and then told the players to assemble at one end of the field for calisthenics.

Oblivious to the warning, Shemonski stepped into a hole on the way to take his calisthenics. The result: a twisted ankle which kept him sidelined for seven weeks. He returned in time to play against the George Washington and Georgetown frosh, scoring three touchdowns on long runs although he handled the ball only five times.

Three weeks ago up in East Lansing, Mich., "The Brat," as the players call the 160-pound speedster, almost came up with the play of the game.

There were only 2 minutes left to play and the Terps were ahead, 34-7. Michigan State had a fourth down on its own 12-yard line and lined up in punt formation.

Shemonski told Halfback Lynn Davis, who was back in double safety with Shemonski to return the punt, to let him have the ball.

"I'm gonna kick it right back to them," he explained. Unfortunately, the State punter kicked out of bounds. When Tatum heard about Shemonski's plans, he asked him why he intended to punt the ball back to Michigan State.

"Oh, I've just never seen it done in a game and was wondering what would happen," Shemonski explained.

Last January against Missouri in the Gator Bowl game, Shemonski scored two touchdowns. His running was perfect both times except for one thing—he went to his left when he was supposed to go to his right and when he was supposed to run to his right he went to his left.

"I thought I was doing wrong while I was running, but then I thought it was too late and went ahead anda scored anyway," he explained to Coach Tatum who was in a state of near apoplexy.

That's Robert Peter Shemonski for you.

Tatum Picks 20 'Winners' In Contest

COACH JIM TATUM of Maryland, guest selector in this week's Washington Post Pick-the-Winners contest, ventured an opinion on the outcome of 20 of the 21 games in the contest, having only a "wish I knew" remark to make about Maryland vs. N. C. State Saturday.

Otherwise, Tatum selected:

WAKE FOREST to tie George Washington; VIRGINIA over VMI (can't vote against a split-T team); SOUTHERN CAL over Navy (both are hungry, but S.C. is stronger); SYRACUSE over Holy Cross; NEBRASKA over Penn State (Nebraska is on the comeback); TENNESSEE over Alabama (another humdinger); VANDERBILT over Florida (Vandy too strong); TULANE over Mississippi; ILLINOIS over Washington; NOTRE DAME over Indiana (Irish aren't as weak as people think); WISCONSIN over Michigan (my super special); MISSOURI over Iowa State (Faurot is ready to roll); KANSAS over Oklahoma A&M (by an eyelash, maybe); TEXAS over Arkansas (Texas one of Nation's best teams); SMU over Rice (nothing can stop the SMUs); TEXAS A&M over TCU; STANFORD over UCLA (toast of the Coast, those Stanfords); DRAKE over Wichita (pure guess); FORDHAM over West Virginia (could be real close).

The probable score game—Yale vs. Cornell—will be Cornell 28, Yale 7, says Tatum.

Senator Joe 3d in Duel of 2-Year-Olds

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAUREL, Oct. 18.—In an all-out drive to the wire, Tuscany, owned by Mrs. S. M. Pistorio of Baltimore, won the $7500 added Maryland Futurity here today.

In becoming Maryland's favorite son, turfically speaking, the colt turned back 10 rivals in the twentieth running of the eagerly sought 2-year-old classic.

Tuscany, a son of the Rhymer, bounded into the finish line a half length in advance of C. E. Tuttle's Tenure. Three quarters of a length farther back in third place came Sentor Joe, the colt owner Alan T. Clarke named for Senator Joe McCarthy.

In the role of the public choice, Tuscany brought a $5.60 mutuel to his backers in a crowd of 8711. The youngster, in making it four victories in six starts of his budding career, turned in a time of 1:12 2/5, equalling the second best clockage for the race registered by Nathaniel in 1946. The Futurity mark of 1:11 3/5 was set by Vincentive in 1942.

Tuscany accounted for $6192.50 in earnings today. His three previous successes had totaled $6200.

The day's secondary feature, the Quantica, proved even more of a thriller than the Futurity. F. A. Bonsal's Pilaster, who seems to thrive on highweights and a variety of distances, got up in the last stride to win in a three-way nose photo finish. Brookemeade Stable's Blue Hills was second with M. Kahlbaum's Risk A Whirl third.

Apprentice Augustino Catalano, who piloted three winners, had the distinction of riding the shortest priced and the longest priced horses on the program. He won with Mrs. Arthur Jensen's Chief John O at $3.40 in the first race and took the finale with Mrs. Jenkins, jr.'s O'Give at $130.60. In between the two, he annexed the seventh with G. C. Smith's Sainte Odette paying $10.

Pimlico Special Has 8 Entries

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 18.—A field of at least eight is practically assured for the fourteenth running of the $15,000 added winner-take-all Pimlico Special to be run on Friday, November 3, opening day of the Pimlico meeting.

The Maryland Jockey Club announced today the eight acceptances the traditional invitation race which in the past has proven to be a major factor in the selection of the "Horse of the Year."

The present lineup for the test of a mile and three sixteenths follows: Greentree Stable's One Hitter, Hasty House Farm's Inseparable, George D. Widener's Light Up, Brandywine Stable's Cochise, Brookmeade Stable's Greek Ship, Tom Gray's Oil Capitol, King's Better Self and Mrs. E. duPont Weir's Royal Governor.

Pilaster, winner here today, was invited but his owner has not accepted. However, the 6-year-old may go providing he wins the Washington Handicap. If so, Maryland would have a popular representative.

WALTER HAIGHT.

Jets Beaten In Finale, 19-16

Chicago's Tommy Atkinson scored a five-point grand slam in the remaining 3:19 to wipe out a two-point Washington lead and defeat the local skaters, 19-16, before 3719 spectators at Uline Arena last night. It was the final game of their National Roller Derby series here.

GW, Deacs Have Pass Teams of Same Names

THE TABLES are turned against George Washington Saturday at Wake Forest.

All season, the Andy Davis-to-Charlie Butler passing combination has been one of G. W.'s most successful. Davis-to-Butler has clicked nine times.

Andy Davis

Saturday, it's G. W.'s turn to go on the defensive against Davis-to-Butler, Wake Forest style.

Little Dickie Davis is Wake Forest's courageous 145-pound quarterback and a crackerjack passer. Ed Butler is a 195-pound end, who specializes in hauling down Davis' passes.

The last time they collaborated was in the final 10 seconds of the North Carolina game Saturday. It was a 37-yard touchdown play that defeated the Tar Heels, 13-7. It was the third straight win for Coach Peahead Walker's Deacons.

Davis is only one of three first-class quarterbacks at Wake Forest. The others are Sophomore Joe Koch of Jersey City and Carroll Blackerby of Bessemer, Ala.

Koch, at 192 pounds, is one of the strongest men on the team. Last August, he and Bob Gaona, 220-pound sophomore center, each wrestled seven minutes with a trained carnival gorilla at Franklinton, N. C., and pocketed $12.

Gaona is the middle of one of the best Wake Forest lines in years. It has yet to yield a touchdown, and ranks fifth in the Nation in total defense. Wake Forest's foes have scored twice through the air.

'Bugs' Makes Good Carrying Ball

By Jack Walsh

GEORGETOWN'S Bugs Thompson played a tremendous game against Maryland at Griffith Stadium last Saturday, but that couldn't have surprised too many people around here.

After all they'd seen Bugs cavort for McKinley Tech when he was classed as one of the finest schoolboy backs ever to perform in the District.

Thompson

What has been overlooked in that Maryland game is that Thompson gave a rare exhibition in this two-platoon age. The slender 165-pounder played all but about three minutes of the game.

Maybe the Georgetown coaches are hard to convince, but they've been impressed mainly with his defensive ability. Against Penn State and Tulsa, he carried the ball only a total of five times.

When Art Gulla, No. 1 left halfback, was forced out early with a spinal injury, Bugs got his chance on offense, too. All he did was score the first touchdown and set up the second with a dazzling 22-yard run.

Thompson took a short pass from Frank Mattingly for that first score. It's the way he did it that was so good. He caught one a moment before to move the ball to Maryland's three, and you almost were certain the next was coming his way.

Asked what sort of fake he executed, Thompson said, "Oh, that was the end cutting in who fooled the Maryland man."

Connie Tough But Reasonable

old age, the prissy figurehead whose strongest expletive was "goodness gracious!"—that was pure myth. The man was a ballplayer in the days when baseball was a roughneck's game and he did all right in the game. He was not a roughneck and not profane by habit, but on occasion he could cuss like any honest mule-skinners. Yes, and when he was younger he played the horses and drank liquor.

He could be as tough as rawhide and as gentle as a mother, reasonable and obstinate beyond reason and courtly and benevolent and fierce. He was kind-hearted and hard-fisted, drove a close bargain and was suckered in a hundred deals. He was generous and thoughtful and autocratic and shy and independent and although, completely lovable.

THERE WAS a day when the Athletics, having broken training camp in Ahaheim, Calif., and left Lena Blackburne, one of the coaches, there with a leg infection, started out of San Francisco for an exhibition game. It was a nippy morning and somebody asked Connie if he wanted the auto window closed against the chill.

"Dammitohell!" Connie exploded. "I'm all right, don't worry about me! Everybody's always fussing about me. Mrs. Mack says, 'Con, wear your rubbers. Con, put on your overcoat.' So I put on my coat and rubbers and go out to buy medicine for her!"

"And that Blackburne!" He was getting madder and madder. "It's 'Boss, are you warm enough? Boss, are you comfortable? Boss, you better come inside and rest.' And where is Blackburne? Lying down there in Anaheim on his tail, dammit!"

There never was another like Connie. There never will be.

trying to find a manager that would be able to follow in Dad's footsteps. Yesterday, we decided that Dykes was our man."

Mack was born December 23, 1862, in East Brookfield, Mass. His name then was Cornelius McGillicuddy but sports writers whittled that down to Connie Mack.

As the "tall tactician" of baseball, Mack brought Philadelphia its first league title in 1902. Again in 1905, with Chief Bender and Eddie Plank as the leading pitchers, the Mackmen dominated baseball's junior circuit.

The first Mack victory in a World Series came in 1910 when the Athletics turned back the Chicago Cubs. They retained the world title in 1911, whipping the New York Giants.

In 1913 and 1914 the Athletics won the American League flag, winning the World Series in 1913.

After finishing seven successive years in the cellar, Mack began rebuilding. Gradually, the Athletics moved into contention until in 1929 they won the first of three straight pennants.

DEAR FOLKS: AT LAUREL

Jockey Frank Bone, who won with Mere Bones on the Wednesday card, has been dubbed "T-bone." He shys he likes to win stakes and eat steaks. Jockey Jimmy Baird went to Johns Hopkins Hospital for a checker up, having been bothered by a slight fever. The sale of this track is no closer than it was two weeks ago. The Florida hurricane leveled the paddock area and wrecked portions of the stands at the Hialeah track. Several horsemen and officials here have families at Miami, and were apprehensive until they phoned. The first claim of the meeting was $5000 put up for Alairne, owned by G. M. Jacobson of Washington. The new roads around the track confused some fans opening day but the parking area was clear in 25 minutes, which police consider excellent time. See you on the rail.—BILL.

One On the Aisle

Audience Is Hare In Chilling Chase

By Richard L. Coe

"STATE SECRET," at the Playhouse, is one of those pictures that makes you wish you were Douglas Fairbanks, jr.

Being Doug, you have enough confidence in yourself to suspect that somehow you'll come through all manner of excitement alive, assured and adept.

You would be an American doctor honored abroad for some tricky brain operation you've perfected. You'd accept an offer to go to one of those Balkan lands for further honors, where you'd discover that the sample operation you were to perform is on the dictator of a police state. You'd be urbanely annoyed at the delay his convalescence causes, but you'd be in a tight spot when the chieftain's heart poohed out, because one quality of dictators is that they can never die.

And when you tried to escape from the police, who are virtually everywhere, you'd have one deuce of a time running down dark alleys, ducking into theaters, implicating anyone who had anything to do with you for any reason. You'd find yourself getting out of one of those dolomite funiculars just in the nick and scratching your way across craggy cliffs to the border.

These things and more happen to Doug in this immensely topical chase yarn, and your fullest enjoyment comes from the writers' and actor's keen ability to put you in his place. They try a few camera tricks to underscore it's YOU who's having all this happen to him and the flashback technique is acceptably used.

The story and direction are from Sidney Gilliat, whose similar chase epics of a decade ago, "The Lady Vanishes" and "Night Train," are still at the top of the class. While the pattern is pretty evident, the police state angle, the photographer in the mountains of northern Italy, the invention of a special language for this unspecified country and crisp character observation are immensely effective gambits.

The Fairbanks style is ideal for the terrifying adventure; a slightly damp forehead suggests the good doctor is aware of his peril. Jack Hawkins, as the police state's chief copper, manages an urbane vein for his villainy and Glynis Johns has a refreshing heroine to fit her unique voice.

"STATE SECRET," a British Lion release of London Films-Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat production, directed and written by Gilliat. At the Playhouse.

Miss Lord died of heart trouble in the West last week after a minor auto accident and next Tuesday a memorial service will be held at New York's Little Church Around the Corner for the brilliant star of "Anna Christie," "The Late Christopher Bean" and "Ethan Frone."

"THE LITTLE BALLERINA" will be shown Saturday morning at 9:30 and 11 at the Plaza Theater . . . This picture, filmed especially for children, present Margot Fonteyn in a leading role; the story concerns child dancers and their ambitions to join the Sadlers Wells Ballet . . . The Children's Theater is co-sponsoring the feature with Sam Roth, Plaza president, and it will be repeated at the same hours the twenty-eighth.

THE MOTLEYS, who have designed some of the most noted stage costumes and settings on both sides of the Atlantic, have created a new wardrobe for Lillian Gish to wear when "The Curious Savage" opens next week in New York . . . Gayety audiences see Mrs. Savage in what's described as "any old dress," but the new clothes will be considerably more extreme, a 1910 style with ankle-length skirts, a large feather chapeau and other peculiar fol-de-rol . . . The idea is that it will further one's immediate impression that this heroine is indeed a strange one.

Baritone David Baker Scores In Schumann's Song Cycle

By Paul Hume

David Baker, baritone, opened his Washington Club recital last night with 16 songs comprising Schumann's cycle, Dichterliebe.

It is a famous cycle of Heine poems, full of various emotions often connected with love in changing aspects. There are moments of tender recollection, lines of anguish over what once was and is no more, and that introspection that marks so many of the greatest German lieder.

Baker is most happy in the gentlest lines. His voice has a rare sympathy, an emotional appeal that is so right for such art songs. His sense of the sound of words is keen and makes his singing a pleasure on the score of diction.

In the larger moments, as in the song, "Ich grolle nicht," the voice has not enough power to sweep the listener along on the heart-breaking climax. It was at such moments too, that Esther Howe, playing the accompaniments, failed to give that incisive rhythmic pulse to the music that would demarcate the differing moods.

The recital closed with songs of Brahms and Hugo Wolf.

In Washington Cathedral Flor Peeters played an organ program for the District Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Peeters is Belguim's leading organist-composer today and has recently been decorated by both his government and Pope Pius for his services to music.

He concluded his program with his own Lied Symphony. This is a five-movement work picturing in sound the natural beauties of the ocean, desert, flowers, mountains, and the sun. It is not so successful as much of Peeters' other writing for organ, or his fine music for chorus, lacking any originality of style, harmony, or structure.

Newsprint Hike Assailed

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—The recent increase of $10 a ton in newsprint announced by two Canadian makers was denounced today as "precipitate, excessive, unwarranted and ill-timed" by Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspapers Association.

Chase Will Contest Settled Out of Court

RENO, Nev., Oct. 18 (AP).—A Silver Spring (Md.) woman's contest over the $1,400,000 will of her father, a noted Philadelphia surgeon, was settled out of court here today.

[How much money, if any, went to the daughter, Mrs. Janice Chase King, of 2000 Shorefield rd., Silver Spring, was not disclosed. She was not at home when called last night.—Editors Note.]

A statement announcing the settlement was distributed by attorneys just as the jury was convening to hear the second day of the trial. The statement said:

"The parties to the will contest of the estate of Dr. Theodore L. Chase announced today that a settlement had been made satisfactory to all concerned and which will result in the contest's being withdrawn and the will of Dr. Chase being admitted to probate."

Dr. Chase gave Temple University $1,400,000 in cash before his death last February at the age of 84. He also left most of the estate residue to the university.

Mrs. King, his only daughter, contended her father was insane at the time he wrote it and that he was subjected to undue influence by Temple University authorities. Dr. Chase had only $3700 when he died.

After today's settlement announcement, William Forman, one of the five lawyers representing Temple University, was asked by a newsman whether Mrs. King received any money under the settlement. He replied, "What do you think?"

Missions Told:

Sane View Of Leprosy Necessary

The need for a sane, scientific approach to the subject of leprosy was stressed by Dr. Eugene Kellersberger as the American Leprosy Missions, Inc., opened its forty-third annual convention here last night.

Dr. Kellersberger, longtime medical missionary in Africa and now general secretary of mission, reminded the meeting it was not until 1920 that a national hospital for treating leprosy was established in the United States.

Dr. Kellersberger said he found leprosy still to be "synonymous with tragedy" in many foreign countries. He visited a spot during the last war, he said, where 59 lepers were killed on an Easter morning "as the easiest way out of an acute economic situation."

"We have confidently carried on an educational campaign throughout the United States," he continued, "to teach our citizens that one with leprosy is not a moral delinquent and that the curse of God is not upon him, but that he is the victim of a disease which should be treated sanely and scientifically."

Dr. Donald Gray Barnhouse, pastor of the Tenth Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, opened the convention yesterday afternoon with descriptions of his visits to leper mission stations in Africa.

The three-day meeting of delegates from America and other countries is being held at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

Today's program starts at 9 a. m. with an address by Dr. Emory Ross, president of the American Leprosy Missions. Other speakers today will be Dr. Howard M. Bosler, head of a leper mission in Nigeria, West Africa, and Dr. Charles T. Leber, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

Rent Increase Granted On 80 Apartment Units

A 9.59 percent rent increase on 80 apartment units at 3900 13th st. nw. was recommended yesterday by District Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson. His action will become final October 27 unless protest is made to the District Rent Control Administrator.

With the increase rents would jump from $48.50 to $56.25 for two-room apartments and from $75 to $82 for 3½-room units. The owners had asked for an 11.73 percent increase to compensate for increased costs.

Five Firms Fined For Violations of Wage, Hour Laws

Amos Hamady, owner of Amos Restaurant, 6916 4th st. nw., was fined $25 by Judge Nadine L. Gallagher for failing to keep adequate time records.

Jacob Parzow, owner of American Restaurant, 1500 7th st. nw., was fined $50 for employing women more than eight hours a day and failing to keep adequate time records.

Arthur Galatz, manager of South Capitol Cleaners, 4013 S. Capitol st., Walter Cohen, owner of Tower Cleaners, 1101 U st. se., and Frank and Ruth Anderson, owners of a beauty parlor at 3620 16th st. nw., were each fined $25 for failing to keep adequate time records.

All defendants pleaded guilty.

New Police Precinct Station Dedicated

The Washington Post

FOURTEENTH PRECINCT—The new police station house for the No. 14 Precinct, at 42d and Benning rd. ne., was dedicated yesterday. At the flag-raising ceremonies were, left to right, Capt. Paul J. Barnes, who heads the new precinct; Pvt. Z. R. Wright and Pvt. C. F. Swann, 25-year men, who raised the flag, and Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett

Hailed as one of the finest such buildings in the Nation, the new Fourteenth Precinct stationhouse was dedicated yesterday in ceremonies attended by District government and police officials.

Commissioner John Russell Young told the assemblage that the $224,000 stationhouse culminated a long dream.

Declaring that the new station house "symbolizes the fine police force we have in Washington," Young praised Police Chief Robert J. Barrett for his part in "making the Department one of the Nation's outstanding police forces."

Area civic leaders who spoke included Adelbert W. Lee, member of the Board of Education, and Woolsey W. Hall, also a Board member and president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Speeches also were made by Barrett and by Capt. Paul L. Barnes of the precinct. Lieut. Hoyle D. Secrest, administrative assistant to the chief of detectives, served as master of ceremonies. The Metropolitan Police Band played.

Features of the station house include soundproof offices for its captain, lieutenants and detectives and a large meeting room for volunteer civilian defense workers. It is a two-story brick building.

The station was officially opened at 12:18 p. m. when the flag was raised but it was actually in business starting at 8 a. m. yesterday.

First customer to get his name entered on the book of the new precinct was Everfield R. Marquess, 52, of Seat Pleasant, Md., who paid a $3 parking ticket shortly before the dedication ceremonies began.

Smithsonian Plans Assembly Of 6 Tons of Fossil Bones

There was news yesterday, but not very meaty, over at the Smithsonian Institution, where 6 tons of fossil bones—largest shipment since 1934—have arrived.

The bones belong—did, that is—to the extinct gigantic ground sloth Megatherium, which hung around in the Ice Age, 20,000 to a million years ago.

Sitting in the midst of this Rin Tin Tin's dreamland was Dr. C. Lewis Gazin, the man who spent four months digging the bones up in western Panama. He's curator of vertebrate paleontology of the United States National Museum.

The Smithsonian's paleontologists will attempt to reconstruct a complete skelton of the giant sloth for exhibition here. A good part of the collection will go back to Panama for exhibition there.

Remains of megatherium have been uncovered at widely scattered places, including Florida and off the Georgia coast, but previously none so nearly complete has been dug up outside of Argentina.

Dr. Gazin's bone-haul indicates an animal about the bulk of an elephant but longer, with a smaller head, very thick legs, huge clawed feet and a heavy tail. Awkward and slow moving, it walked on the sides of its feet.

Dr. Gazin's real thrill, said he, was the time in Wyoming when he dug bones of animals which lived in the Eocene Age. These were really venerable creatures, having lived 60 to 80 million years ago.

Wife's 'Hope' for Mate's Death Brings Him Limited Divorce

A 62-year-old former businessman here who claimed that his homelife gave him "anxiety neurosis" won a limited divorce in District Court on the grounds of cruelty yesterday.

He is William Tendrich of North Beach, Md. The wife, Mrs. Etta Levine Tendrich, 53, of 23 8th st. se., had also claimed a nervous condition was caused by the ill-fated marriage.

But for Tendrich, the divorce decree was a costly victory. Finances were at the root of the marital difficulties, according to testimony. Yet, Judge Richmond B. Keech said he was powerless to force Mrs. Tendrich to split with her husband the real estate holdings they held jointly.

Commented Judge Keech:

"On the testimony, she has no affection or respect for her husband. Her sole aim was to perpetuate their joint tenancy of three properties in the hope he would predecease her."

The jurist then said that under District laws he could not split the joint tenancy in the limited divorce decree.

As a result, according to his lawyer, Reuben Bonnet, Tendrich "is both pauper and rich man," because he must live on the proceeds of $600 a year from the properties valued at $60,000. And, said Bonnett, the marriage had wrecked Tendrich to the point where he can no longer work.

Tendrich charged that just three months after the death of her first husband, she came to him and offered her hand, stating that she was a wealthy widow who would set him up in business.

The husband, who had been divorced from his first wife for cruelty, agreed. But, he said, he got no peace.

"I'd keep on getting sick," he testified. "I'd sit down to dinner and find Paris green on the table. I was afraid she might be poisoning me so I began cooking my own meals."

Tendrich said he began feeling better, but had lost 25 pounds.

Mrs. Tendrich, who according to her husband, has $300 a month income, said that she lived up to his original demands, but that he always wanted more money.

Transfer Firm Drivers Hear Safety Program

Accident precention was discussed at a dinner meeting of 200 drivers of the Jacobs Transfer Co. Tuesday night at the company's office at 61 Pierce st. ne.

John Quirk, traffic engineer of the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. here, spoke. Movies were shown by Capt. Carl Wright of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's police department.

Gas Company's Testimony Is Delayed

Washington Gas Light Co. testimony in the battle over higher wholesale gas rates in this area was delayed yesterday, probably until Friday.

Th issue is under study by the Federal Power Commission. Examiner Ewing G. Simpson is hearing evidence on the application of Atlantic Seaboard Co. for higher rates on gas supplied to the local concern.

The gas company has said that the proposed boost might increase its costs a million dollars a year with a consequent boost in consumer rates.

Yesterday's hearing continued cross-examination of Atlantic's vice president, Robert J. Ryder. Further examination with testimony of other witnesses is scheduled for today, according to W. Russell Gorman, FPC attorney handling the case.

Wife Is Awarded $5000 From Former Husband

4 Arraigned In Thefts at Meat Market

Light was being shed on the big meat mystery yesterday. Arraigned in Municipal Court were:

Jack Lewis Katz, 30, of 1830 Maryland ave. ne., charged with taking $557 from the American Meat Co. at 1254 4th st. ne., where he is employed as a cashier.

Maurice A. Owings, 49, of 1836 Indiana ave. se., a butcher at the Buckingham Meat Market at 2920 Nichols ave. se.

Samuel Goldberg, 52 of 3818 East Capitol st. ne., proprietor of Goldberg Grocery at 1001 South Carolina ave. se., charged with receiving stolen property.

Police gave this version of the four arrests:

While conducting an on-the-spot investigation Tuesday of a reported money shortage at American Meat Co., detectives received a complaint from the Buckingham meat market that their delivery of meat that day from American brought only 12 hindquarters instead of the 13 they had ordered.

Under questioning, Crestwell confessed taking the extra hindquarter by agreement with Owings, then taking it to Goldberg's store and selling it for $40. He was to split the money with Owings, he said. The plan was fouled up when another butcher at Buckingham discovered the shortage.

Police said Owings denied making an agreement with Crestwell and that Goldberg said he didn't know the meat had been stolen.

The Katz case was an entirely separate matter, police said. They said Katz admitted taking a bank deposit of $557 out of American Meat Co's safe and spending it on "gambling."

James Witt, president and owner of the meat company, said the company had been trying to trace the shortage since September and praised police for cracking the case in one day. About $1500 is still missing, he said.

Katz and Crestwell were arrested Tuesday night; Goldberg and Owings yesterday morning.

Virginia Textbook Plan Emphasizes History of State

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Virginia history and government textbook commission today came up with a plan intended to provide new, improved texts in State history, government and geography at three stages in Virginia's public schools.

Chairman Cecil W. Taylor of Lynchburg reported the commission gave hearty approval to suggestions submitted by the State Board of Education. These contemplate:

1. A simple, entertaining, attractive and informative book for fourth-grade use on Virginia history, with emphasis on the pioneer days.

2. A new text on State history, government and geography for the seventh grade.

3. Another new textbook developing fully the story of Virginia history and government for use in high school.

Navy Day Revival On October 27 Planned by Group

The Navy League announced yesterday that it intended to revive the October 27 Navy Day celebration this year despite Defense Department unification of service observances.

Frank A. Hecht, president of the league, said a tour of the United States had convinced him there was "an overwhelming demand" for the Navy Day revival. It will include, he said, a broader program honoring the birthday of President Theodore Roosevelt, greatest modern-day champion of a powerful First Line of Defense." The celebration, he declared, would be a "patriotic crusade."

The Navy Department itself joined this year in celebrating "Armed Forces Day" in lieu of its 28-year-old Navy Day observance. The Navy League, an unofficial organization of industrialists and others interested in the Navy, is not bound by Defense Department rulings.

$405 'Deflation' Hits GOP Man Hearing Truman

A "100 percent Republican" was taken for $405 listening to President Truman's speech late Tuesday night.

He is Albert Paquette, 42, a traveling engineer for the Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Co., staying at the Stratford Hotel, 25 E st. nw.

Despite his own political affiliation, Paquette wanted to hear the President speak. With no radio in his room, Paquette went to his car, parked in front of the hotel.

In the middle of the speech, a man approached suddenly from the street side and shoved Paquette's head under the dashboard. Another man entered, opened the other door, took Paquette's wallet, containing $405, and a valuable wristwatch, and then disappeared.

"That's what I get," Paquette said. "Here I am a 100 percent Republican listening to an old Democrat. That was a very expensive session I had with Mr. Truman."

Colors Lowered By Alumnus of Yegg University

CADILLAC, Mich., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—A 22-year-old burglar testified today that he learned the art of safe-cracking at a modern "crime university", in Chicago.

Dale Line of Evart, Mich., on trial for an $800 safe burglary, said a "foreign-looking professor" taught criminal techniques with movies and had a "substantial crowd."

Line said the school, in Chicago's Loop area, also taught how to break into buildings without making noise. He added that the "university" even maintained a graduate school. Graduates are furnished with a telephone number to call for aid when they come across a safe they can't open, he said.

State Police Sergt. Lewis Cook commented that Line "must have got good grades."

But he fell short when it came to evading the law. He pleaded guilty to safe-cracking and received a sentence of 7½ to 15 years.

Walter Winchell . . . In New York

Notes of a Newspaperman

Cynics and optimists are half-blind. One sees the bright side and the other the dark—when the truth depends on viewing both sides . . . A historian's new book stresses the theme that Hitler won the war, and several editorialists have used the tome to get in another sneer at FDR . . . The Hitler-won-the-war theory is an insult to the intelligence of our citizens and defames the sacrifices of our soldiers . . . The yardstick for measuring the extent of our victory in World War II—is realizing What We Did Not Lose . . . If Hitler had triumphed, the U. S. Would now be one massive concentration camp. Our victory prevented Nazism from destroying democracy. That is our triumph—and there can be no greater victory.

Despite the pressure brought by influential Nazi friends in the West German govt, the City Council of Bonn just voted 15 to 10 to bar pianist Elly Ney from Bonn concert stages . . . Because of her Nazi record . . . Elly is the wife of pianist Walter Gieseking, who was refused entry here (following this column's reminders to Immigration authorities) and for whom a few commentators attempted to raise a storm of protest, only to discover they had no Hoopers.

Former Nazi agent Baron Carl Von Merck, interned in South America during the war as one of Hitler's "most dangerous men," recently visited the Panama Canal zone and U. S. installations.

He has since published secret details of our defenses in a Buenos Aires Nazi rag.

The neo-Nazi sheet, "Alpenruff," in Austria apparently never heard about our renown as a Nazi exterminator . . . Its latest issue (page 10, col'm 4) has a long essay about us . . . "A wonderful journalist and force for civic good because of his fight against gangsterism."
Donkashane and Phooey.

From an Oct. 14th UP story: "John J. McCloy today ordered the immediate release from prison of Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, who was sentenced to five years for war crimes. His release was ordered under a new policy of clemency for war criminals."
McCloy for German ambassador to Washington!

Countless lives destroyed in two World Wars have failed to convince Allied diplomats of the folly of trusting Germany . . . We are now frantically rearming Western Germany in the hope they can be depended upon as an ally in the event of war with Russia . . . The State Dept. okayed it . . . But on March 30, 1945, the same Dep't. of State publicly warned: "Reliable information collected by Allied governments clearly indicates the Nazi regime has arranged postwar plans for the perpetuation of Nazi doctrines and domination."

Truman's rosy view (that Russia can be tamed with truth) has no roots in realism . . . This is to urge the President to read Brooks Atkinson's Pulitzer Prize winning articles on Russia in the July, 1946, N. Y. Times—and learn the meaning of Communism.
Atkinson reported: "In an attempt to establish workable relations with the government of the Soviet Union we have to abandon the familiar concepts of friendship. Friendship in the sense of intimate association and political compromise is not wanted, is not possible, and is not involved. For the Soviet government 'apparatus' as the Russians use the word, is a political machine; and human approaches, like those implied in the word 'friendship,' are wide of the mark . . . Communism is not only a political science but a religion, and its conduct is governed by dogma as well as reason. The believers have to accept it without reservation. This religious fervor underlies the Soviet attitude toward foreign countries and is assiduously cultivated at home."

The McCarran Law was passed Sept. 23 . . . The law provides a 30-day period for voluntary registration of Communists and their "fronts." That period is now coming to an end—and not one Communist has offered to register.
P. S.: The Gov't still hasn't printed the official forms for the Communist registration. Wotta farce!

The Congressional files reveal that Communist tactics now being spotlighted (and many of the Communists mentioned) were probed by a Congressional Committee a long time ago. Yet that failed to halt their subversive rampaging . . . Not one Communist was indicted after all phases of Communist subversive activities were made public by a Congressional committee—in 1931!

Att'n, Congressman Wood of the House Un-American Activities Committee: Joseph P. Kamp was scheduled to be released from Federal prison Oct. 15th . . . He may go back to the clink for refusing to tell the Buchanan Committee (investigating lobbying) the names of contributors . . . Kamp brags to intimates that he has complete access to the files of the House Un-American Activities Comm. and the files of the Americanism Commission of the American Legion.
How about that, Cong. Wood and Commanders Cocke and Craig?

Former Secretary Patterson last week ripped into the Munitions Board for ordering 75 million dollars worth of Canadian aluminum . . . His attack resulted in cancellation of the orders . . . Now don't get excited . . . Hold onto your millinery . . . Not only is Canadian aluminum costlier than ours, but this Canadian outfit is merely a branch of an American-owned firm . . . Owned by the Mellons and Doris Duke, the Richest Girl in the World—and No Wonderrrrr!

The exposes here and over the air about Hitler-helper Karol Sidor resulted in the authorities chasing him out of the country . . . His friends then circulated bunk about us in Scranton, Penn., and other places . . . Congressman Cavalcante of Pa., defended this soandso as "pro-American and anti-Communist" . . . Neglecting to add that Sidor was also a Nazi.

To our editor in Scranton: We can prove it with a photo of him (in uniform) giving Adolf the Nazi salute.

The Man Without a Country has turned from fiction to fact . . . George Shaw Wheeler (native American), who denounced the United States and renounced his citizenship—asked the Communists in Prague for asylum . . . He is now in dire straits—despised even by the Reds and loathed by the Czechs . . . He is a most pitiful figure there, we are informed . . . Through a friendly Embassy Wheeler sent word this week that he wants to get out of the Red Paradise—back home—to the U.S.A.

This is to inform him that the United States does not admit foreigners with Communist records and that he will not be admitted to his native American soil again—even to be buried.

Housing Is Most Serious Problem Faced by the Aged

(Editor's Note: The problems of the aged are always with most of us in this era of urban living in compact apartments and smaller homes. This is the fourth of five articles in which Dr. Martin S. Gumpert, a specialist on sickneses of the aged, discusses these problems.)

By Dr. Martin S. Gumpert
CHAPTER IV

EVERYBODY who deals with older people knows that housing is their most urgent and most serious problem.

There is today practically no American family without some kind of old-age trouble.

The housing shortage has forced thousands of younger people to room in with the old ones, or vice versa. If I had to answer the question as to whether old people should live together with the families of their grown-up children or grandchildren, I would answer emphatically "no," at least not in our cities.

In rural communities, on farms, etc., there is often enough room for both old and young, and job opportunities for the aged rural population are much more favorable than in our big cities.

However, we must face the fact that we are rapidly changing from a rural nation into an urban nation, and nothing is worse for the harmonious development of a family than overcrowded and unsuitable city quarters. I have often seen the peace of a family group deeply disturbed by the unavoidable complications and emotional tension which arise if old and young live too close together.

IT IS practically impossible to find in our large cities adequate housing for older people, even for those with ample funds.

The idea of charitable old-age homes in which elderly people can be grouped is only a dream. Four fifths of the aged live in families with relatives. Only 4.3% live in institutions or hotels; but what institutions and what hotels.

There are, of course, some excellent modern and progressive old-age homes, which provide occupational and recreational facilities, and in which old and incapacitated people can live happily. However, the majority of our present old-age homes are nothing but dumping places for the aged, with an entrance and no exit, where nothing constructive is done for them. They are just kept alive until they die.

THE fact that our mental institutions are so terribly crowded with aged "patients" shows only that there is no other place for them to go when their families want to get rid of them.

What we need are more and better housing facilities especially designed for our older population.

The only successful experiment in this direction of which I know is the Tompkins Square Apartment House in New York, for many years administered by the Community Service Society, which provides old people, many of them still working, with an opportunity of independent, dignified living on a non-profit basis.

UNDER the present system the aging citizen is not relieved of fear and insecurity even with a limited pension or annuity or old-age insurance at his disposal. Methods should therefore be developed which will, in due time, assure him of sufficient services instead of insufficient cash, and provide him with a safe and satisfactory shelter in pleasant surroundings which in no way resemble the prison-like character of an institution.

Housing projects could be developed in the neighborhood of large cities, where real estate is not too expensive, and could be subsidized on a low-rent basis by prepaid premiums.

These housing projects would serve the special needs of the elderly tenants by special features of construction, starting with the improvement of the bathtub in which so many old people die today, and going on to heat, light, elevators, ramps, room service, diet cafeterias, recreational facilities, laundries, etc.

Routine medical and nursing care should be included in the rent. It is often a great fear of old and lonely people—getting sick, or dying alone without attention.

OPPORTUNITIES for productive work, adapted to the faculties of an older person, should be within reach; partial or total self-support is a factor of highest psychological value to the elderly.

Friday: We must learn how to grow older.

Lazy-Man Thomas Says Video's Work

By Jack Gaver

NEW YORK (U.P.).—Those big-name comics, who are making the plunge into television this fall with hour-long shows, are working harder than ever before.

Vaudeville, night clubs, Broadway shows, movies, radio—are all cinches compared to the demon TV, and you can take the word of Danny Thomas for that.

Thomas made his bow last week on the NBC Wednesday night lineup that includes once-a-month appearances by himself, Ed Wynn and Jimmy Durante. And once a month is plenty, he said. He'll escape to the clatter and chatter of night clubs between TV programs to rest up.

Durante

"Imagine! Eleven run-throughs of a show that will be seen only once," Thomas said in an off moment. "The TV public hasn't seen me yet and I've already had a career. But as I always say, 'C'est la TV.' And to think that I got into show business because I'm essentially a lazy man.

"The work that goes into this is incredible. Think what it would be if you were a performer starting from scratch, without a background of know-how and material built up through years of experience."

HOWEVER TOUGH the ordeal, the Thomas knack for being funny without cracking jokes or going slapstick, all the while weaving bits of homely philosophy into his monologues, makes a first-rate contribution to television, which so far has managed to use several prominent performers rather badly. The expressive Thomas face is ideal for the medium.

"I wasn't taking any chances on being caught in this game without an accomplice," Thomas said. "I brought another comedian to the program with me—Julie Oshins. I think he's one of the finest performers and brains in the comedy field. I didn't want him so much as a performer, although he works in various scenes, but as an extra writer and all-round thinker.

"Julie helps with the direction, looks after backstage details that I can't always be on top of, dreams up ideas and carries the aspirin bottle. He's stronger than I am. It's a good-sized bottle. And king-sized tablets, of course."

THOMAS has been under a double handicap preparing this program. He succumbed to the currently popular New York ailment—the Indian summer cold—as soon as he arrived from Hollywood, and this is the first time that he's ever embarked on a new venture without wife Rosemary at hand to counsel and comfort.

"We figured the three kids needed her more than I did, but we were wrong," Thomas said. "Anybody can grow us. If they want exclusive rights to her from now on they'll have to get their own TV show."

By the time he does his next video show Thomas hopes to have the family settled here to stay through the winter. He flew back to Beverly Hills immediately after the Wednesday night program, not only to arrange for the trek, but to do some additional work on his latest film, "Call Me Mister." Two more songs have been written for Thomas and he has to do a quick job of getting them in the can.

"And I'll be doing all of the night club work I can sandwich in," the comedian said. "I'm scheduled for 17 days at the Chez Paree in Chicago next month. It will be a nice change of pace, working to tables instead of huddling over tables in television conferences."

AN ESTIMATED 10 million TV sets are being turned out per year, according to the Radio-Television Manufacturers Association. . . . A deal is pending for NBC-TV to present a special televised performance of the sell-out Sadlers' Wells Ballet during the British troupe's stay at New York City's Metropolitan Opera House. . . Dennis Day is auditioning a TV show with Gloria De Haven as his co-star.

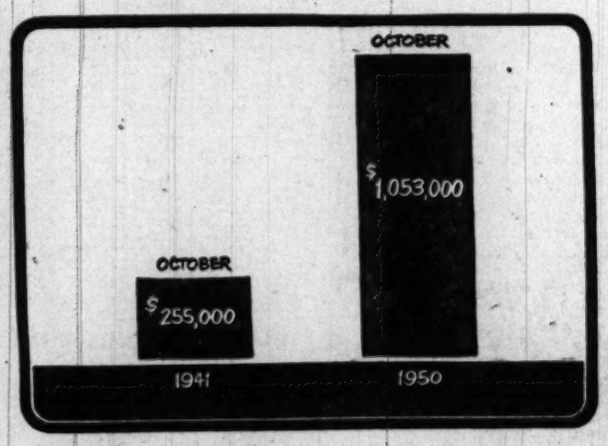
What's happening to the ALMIGHTY DOLLAR?

HOW the modern American fighting man gets to be one is told in pictures in today's NEWSWEEK. If you ever wore a uniform, or think you will some day, don't fail to read this comprehensive pictorial feature.

WHO told Perle Mesta she could not attend the opening of "Call Me Madam"—and why—is revealed in "Periscope" in today's NEWSWEEK. And the smash Broadway hit, starring Ethel Merman, is reviewed in the Theater section.

WHAT is the real significance of Truman's visit to MacArthur? Who suggested the meeting? What was Truman told not to talk about? These and other questions are answered—bluntly and authoritatively—in today's NEWSWEEK.



WHY did advertisers spend more than $1,000,000 in October, 1950 for the first time in NEWSWEEK? The answer is probably this: they have learned through experience that advertising in NEWSWEEK pays off.

Has the dollar become a casualty of the Korean war? Has it depreciated in terms of other currency? Is smart money fleeing from the U.S.? These are questions every man and woman in business should consider, for the "decline of the dollar" is developing with surprising speed.

Today's NEWSWEEK tells you what is happening to the dollar . . . why it happened . . . and what the long-range significance may be. You will want to read every word of this penetrating article.

How HE and SHE Should Dress When They Go Out Together

A NEW IDEA in fashion shows will be presented tonight for the first time at 6 o'clock at the Mayfair Restaurant on 13th street, when the Emily Shop and Fred Pelzman's Fashion Shop show coordinated fashions for the Capital's young smart career girls and the men in their lives.

HERE THE YOUNG MAN shows which is HIS GIRL by wearing Her color—gray flannel in a single-breasted suit with checkered vest to coordinate with her (girl on right) banker's gray flannel suit from the Emily Shop. Her suit has the new slim skirt with short boxy jacket collared and lined with gray tingona lamb.

THE THIRD WHEEL in this picture wears a suit of soft green wool with coat lined throughout with lovely muskrat—a suit that looks many $$$ more than its modest price. This also comes in spice color

Standing Room Only Greets Congressional Fashion Show

"STANDING ROOM only" was the order of the day yesterday at the Congressional Country Club when Erlebacher's supplied the fashion show for Congressional's annual fashion luncheon. Guests were actually standing in the halls trying to get a peek at the glamorous clothes.

One of the coat highlights—very new looking—was a brown and black imported tweed fitted coat with black braid and velvet trim. Applause also greeted a very dramatic big coat with big sleeves, big sweep and tiny collar made of black fleecy wool lined with stunning plaid taffeta.

Among suits shown, the guests liked Anthony Blotta's imported angora tweed in bright gold, with double flap pockets and a brown chiffon stole edged with tweed.

STARS OF THE showing—and of 1950 fashions, for that matter—were the evening clothes. On the slim side of the picture were two stunning gowns. One, by Trigere, was in satin with a fringed white diamond-studded bodice topping a smooth side-draped short black skirt. The other was a sheath affair with camisole top and a skirt fashioned of alternating flounces of black lace and accordion-pleated net. This was shown with a fabulous black fox stole.

In the oh! and ah! department was a ball gown of coral net sprinkled with sequins. The gown was strapless, a matching net stole filming the shoulders.

Finn Chorus Lands in U. S.; To Give Concert Friday

TWO PLANES from Finland landed at La Guardia yesterday. One, the Icelandic, brought six members of the Lolytech Chorus and their brides; the second, bachelor members of the singing group to be heard in Constitution Hall tomorrow evening under the aegis of the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jutila.

Mrs. Emil Hurja reports a brisk sales of boxes for this musical event, the first in a series on the American tour of the chorus. She and Mr. Hurja are entertaining Associate Justice and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson and Gen. and Mrs. Richard M. Cutts at dinner preceding the concert. Later they will be guests in the Hurja box. The Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest Sherman will be in the box which Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim have taken,

The Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila and members of the Legation staff will be in the audience to welcome the young singing students and Conductor Ossi Elokas who will be guests of honor at a reception following the concert in the legation on Woodland dr.

Maxwell Hamilton, former United States Minister to Finland, and Mrs. Hamilton will have as their guests for the evening the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin, the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Reuchlin, the Minister of the Philippines and Mrs. Abello, and the Minister of China and Mrs. Tan. Mr. Hamilton is now chairman of the Far Eastern Commission.

Prong Setting

AS MUCH IN VOGUE AS IT WAS FIFTY YEARS AGO

Mounting styles may come and go - but the round prong setting goes on forever. The reason is that all interest is centered on the diamond itself - that the brilliance of the stone is emphasized. Our modern version of this setting is four prongs - rather than the original six. Since the tips are hardly discernible, the diamond seems to float on the finger. Two outstanding examples are in the rings shown above.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Severe Breakdown, Woman Started Analysis; Treatment Was Unsatisfactory, Now Is Suspended; She Feels Neglected, Frightened, Asks What Next?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago I suffered a severe breakdown; and my doctor's calm acceptance of my "nervous condition" deluded me into thinking time might cure it, so I let things drift, after getting treatment for physical ills. But after a year my symptoms became alarming and I consulted a reputable psychiatrist, who diagnosed "psychoneurosis" and talked of administering electric shock.

However, my long illness and other special expenses had depleted family funds, so I couldn't afford the treatment, as I told him. After a considerable time lapse, and at some trouble to himself, this doctor was instrumental in getting me admitted to a psychiatric clinic as an out-patient, where I went weekly for eight months to a young doctor who attempted psychoanalysis. I had been reading along this line, knew pretty much what to expect, and was prepared to cooperate.

After three months I felt this doctor was too inexperienced and not keen enough to help anyone as disturbed as I; but I put this down to average patient "resistance" and continued treatment. Later I became so dissatisfied that I went to the first psychiatrist and aired my grievances thoroughly. He thought my points well taken, but said the young analyst was leaving town and I would be transferred shortly to another man, probably, so just play along, which I did.

The analyst did leave town and I was to be transferred to a group that would be organized later, I was told, and I would be notified by mail. I've heard nothing since, and while I intend to check on it, the whole set-up seems so uncertain that I truly haven't much hope of recovery through them. On my own I have taken a long vacation, have worked outside the home, and have made an earnest effort towards new friends and interests,—all in vain.

What frightens me is that I am in sole charge of my young children, and my husband is out of town a lot. I honestly believe that due to my sick impulses and compulsions I am not fit to be in charge; and that potential tragedy is brewing. My family refuses to believe I am ill, and reacts impatiently if I try to discuss it. I've known great physical pain, but this mental suffering is incomparably worse. I don't know what else to do to help myself. Do you? After the psychiatrist, what? D. D.

DEAR D. D.: In cutting your letter to the bone, I've left out much complaint material. Your tone toward life is injured. Nobody does quite right by you; nobody understands, believes or helpfully responds. Even the doctors, every one, leave you vaguely wronged and emptyhanded, so you feel.

You are sick, I grant, and ailing persons often are fretful and hard to please in the depths of illness. But still I think your marked sense of injury is more than a symptom of general upset. I think it is probably a primary source of your emotional sickness; and that your unconscious rage and anxiety about this unconscious "fixation" finally got you down; that is, manifested in a "breakdown."

Very likely you got scant treatment from the time of birth,—physical nurture that kept you alive, but not the warm love, the lavish assurance of welcome, that really satisfies human sensibilities and instills feelings of comfort, security, personal worth and true belonging. The newborn infant bawls at his environment as if he instinctively assumes his needs should be met; and if he's neglected instead, naturally a sense of injury accrues and festers.

If this psychic wound is carried unhealed, then every social cut, thrust, deprivation, injustice, misfortune, etc., encountered in later experience seems to plunge a dagger into it, figuratively speaking. Events and adversities that wouldn't greatly trouble a secure personality arouse horrific anxiety and smothered rage, or mental suffering, as you call it, in the injured character. But what can you do about it now, assuming this is your story, as I think it may be? There is no simple remedy that a doctor can administer. You've got to accept yourself as is, and then work around the handicap, using all sorts of aids.

Glenn Clark says the most difficult cases, psychologically, are those persons who don't love; and maybe that's your block at present. If so, start trying to love, and for help in this, make a church affiliation. Read Agnes Sandford's wonderful book "The Healing Light" (Macalaster Park Publication, St. Paul, Minn.), heed her advice about the restorative power of the religious sacraments; and keep on the trail of good psychiatry. As for electric shock treatments, my advice is, don't take them. The very idea seems barbarous to me. M. H.

Edna Advised to Dramatize the Coppery Lights in Her Rusty-Red Hair

(Twelfth Day of Edna's Beauty Program)

By Ann Lawrence

YOUR HAIR may actually be as rusty as a flower pot, yellow as a marigold, brown as cafe au lait, or even a pale pink, and you will still be called a redhead. There are many different shades all lumped under the red heading.

Consequently, it is a mistake to be bound too much by generalizations as to what this type can and cannot wear.

It's a mistake, too,—and a most common one—to consider only the color of your hair, outstanding as it may be, in choosing your costume colors.

Think of the color of your skin, hair and eyes in that order when you select your make-up and your wardrobe. Better yet, form a clear impression of the total color picture produced by the combination of these three. When you do this, you can better select everything else that contributes to your head as a unit. Of course, the size and shape of the head, your features and your body have an important bearing, too, on everything you wear, including your color schemes.

If your hair leans toward the rusty-brown side like Edna's, then you can dramatize the coppery lights with bronze, deep browns, such as the new sanka brown or coffee, with dark greens, or with pale creams and beiges. Beware of browns, however, that too closely match your hair—those with ruddy tones. These can steal your thunder and make you as all-of-a-piece as a cinnamon bear!

There are two violently opposed schools of thought on the subject of red and pink. Some designers think that contrast lovely (provided the wearer has a milky-pale skin and hair on the red-gold side); others believe that any red or pink, regardless of hair and skin tone, ruins the hair and takes all its beautiful glow away from it.

Many redheads have been taught, from the time they were tiny tots, that kelly green, nile green and bright blues were striking compliments to their hair. 'Tis true, they are flaming opposites, but in the majority of cases the contrast is too violent for beauty.

Not to let the color of your costume compete with the color of your hair is the safest rule. Your head is flamboyant enough with an aureole of red tresses to attract and hold attention.

Honey Cake Just the Dish To Serve to Your Honey; Here's How to Make It

DEAR ANNE:

I would appreciate it very much if you could give me a recipe for honey cake.

R. D., Washington.

If you want a honey cake that's moist and tender, you'll like this recipe.

SOFT HONEY CAKE

- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ cup shortening
- 1 cup honey
- 1 egg
- ½ cup sour milk or buttermilk

Sift flour, salt, soda, and spices together. Cream shortening and honey until light and thick. Add to honey mixture. Add sour milk and fold in sifted, dry ingredients. Turn into two greased (8-inch) layer pans and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for 25 to 30 minutes. Spread with your favorite icing.

DEAR ANNE:

We would like to adopt a baby but don't know just how to go about it. Can you give us some information as to whom we should contact here in this area. Mrs. A. G. M., Washington.

If you're searching for an infant to adopt, there are a dozen different agencies that place babies for adoption in this area. Most of these are operated by various church groups. If you attend church, I'd suggest that you consult your pastor about how to get in contact with one of these groups.

Another way in which you might obtain a youngster is through the Board of Public Welfare for the District of Columbia. If you've already found a child you want to adopt, however, ask the Board for advice about the steps you must now take.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me if there is a place in Washington which sells stockings (ordinary stockings, not elastic) for people with crooked legs? Due to an out-of-line knee, I can't wear stockings with any degree of comfort as the stocking twists around my leg as I walk. Perhaps one of your readers has met and solved a similar problem and will be willing to tell me about it. A. E., Riverdale, Md.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you know of any method to clean the chrome on my waffle iron? Had a bad mishap the other day when one of my plastic place mats stuck to the hot iron. Although I have removed most of it, there are still traces showing. Rita Hofer, Alexandria, Va.

Since this plastic softens with heat, you will be more successful at wiping off the residue when the waffle is warm. Perhaps you have already done all you can in this direction. A good silver polish can be used on the chrome to brighten it, so try that. Be gingerly about it, though, as the chrome plate on such equipment is usually quite thin. Buffing with a soft cloth will also restore lost luster to chromium.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Serve Food With a Flair, Expert Advises

IT'S NOT THE FUSS, it's the flair!

That's the secret of putting drama into food, Miss Mary Dahnke, told Soroptomist Club members at luncheon yesterday at the Willard. Miss Dahnke is director of Consumer Service for the Kraft Foods Co.

DON'T OVERCOOK and overdecorate when you're entertaining, Miss Dahnke advised homemakers in her audience. You destroy food texture and flavor, and get yourself in a lather beside! Be easy and simple about it. Remember color. Have beautiful contrasts in the shade of foods, in your plates and linens. Use clever accessories—an unusual serving spoon or knife, attractive salts and peppers and the like.

As an example of a simple dessert served with flair, she suggested Roquefort or Bleu cheese and fresh pears. You spread the sharp cheese on the cool pear slices as you eat them. As a basis for a delicious luncheon, she suggested chef's salad, easily and quickly made with left-over ham and cheese cut in thin strips and tossed with assorted greens—L. B.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Programs Change, But The Jokes Go On Forever

The next meeting of the District Line Club (8 p. m., October 25, Petworth Library) will feature a "rebroadcast" of a program called "Kaltenmeyer's Kindergarten."

Seven actors will be chosen at random from the audience, and—without rehearsal—will read their parts from a prepared script.

This may appear to be a screwball undertaking, but as Damon Runyon used to say, "a story goes with it."

Here years ago than he cares to admit, Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se., the club's president, attended a broadcast in Chicago. He enjoyed "Kaltenmeyer's Kindergarten" immensely, and took home a script of the show as a souvenir.

In the years that have passed since that broadcast, the show has been discontinued. But its principal comedians found other work, and at last reports were still making a fair living in radio—under the names of Fibber McGee and Molly.

You're all welcome to attend the "rebroadcast" Wednesday night.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH PRETZELS?

A doctor is a fellow who will call a spade a spade and erythroblastosis foetalis erythroblastosis foetalis. But it looks like there are some things he just can't bring himself to say.

The announcement for the medical society's program last night, for example, included the lines:

Social Hour, Refreshments.
(B—r and Pr—ls)

Unable to figure out what the blanks represented, I took the announcement to my druggist, George Jolson. "You're good at figuring out medical abbreviations," I said. "What kind of refreshments are they going to have?"

George scratched his head and put on an act that would have made Brother Al proud of him. "Gee, I don't know," he said. "I don't recognize the handwriting."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Gentle, dignified cocker spaniel, AKC registered; also a scatterbrained, lovable 7-month-old pup, half cocker. We're moving into an apartment." (Wisconsin 6174.)

"All-white mother cat and two cute 7-week-old kittens." (Sligo 5999.)

"Gentle 3-year-old blonde cocker spaniel; has tags." (Georgia 8345.)

"Assorted kittens, 5 weeks old." (Johnson 3-5907.)

"Eight-week-old male kitten." (Lockwood 5-4077.)

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Add things I never knew until now: There are more than 6000 sets of "dealers'" license tags in use in Washington today, and Charles W. Heflin at the Bureau of Motor Vehicles says there will undoubtedly be more issued before the year is over. "We ordered 7000 sets," he tells me, "and now we're wondering whether that was enough." The auto business must be pretty good.

IT'S ALL IN FUN

Post Reporter Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., informs me that the local British colony is having a lot of fun with the names of two recent American appointees to London: Walter Gifford, our new Ambassador, and Charles M. Spofford, our representative on the North Atlantic Council of Deputies.

"These two top men of yours confuse some of our people in London," Kuhn was told. "It may take a while before we come to know the Gifford and Spofford names well enough to keep them straight."

One Britisher with a sense of humor suggested that somebody ought to write a play in which Spofford says, "Don't give me any guff, Gifford," to which Gifford answers, "Surely, you're spoofing, Spofford."

Personally, I think the names are perfectly simple, and should cause no trouble. Mr. Gufford is the Ambassador, and Mr. Spooford is the Council representative. It's not as confusing as some thinkle peep it is.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Catherine Scarborough of the Baltimore Sun dropped in at the General Services Administration information office the other day in quest of some facts for a story she was working on.

"I'm Catherine Scarborough," she introduced herself. The fellow behind the desk didn't blink an eye as he replied:

"How do you do? And I'm Alfred Newberry, the copy boy who used to fill pastepots for you back in 1914."

It was a great reunion—and in case you're trying to figure out Al's age, he was 12 years old when he started on the Sun.

OVERHEARD

The folks at the Eastman Kodak store are not only good neighbors to the extent of recommending a competitor at times, but ingenious enough to do it cleverly. A clerk answering the phone the other day was heard to say: "No, we don't carry that in stock, but you might get it at Fuller and D'Albert's." The caller had apparently said, "Where was that?" because the clerk repeated:

"Fuller, as in brush; D-apostrophe as in the Fourth Musketeer; and Albert as in Queen Victoria's Consort."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

California Campaign Significant

By Drew Pearson

Out of the turbulent, hard-slugging gubernatorial race in California may well come a future President of the United States.

Roosevelt

The race is between colorful, audacious Jimmy Roosevelt who, with his father's voice and charm, has been covering California like a patchwork quilt until there is almost no town which has not seen or heard him; and on the other side, Republican Gov. Earl Warren, one of the most level-headed executives in the United States of America.

The contest is important not merely because of the personalities involved but because of the growing importance of California in the Nation. There was a day when Virginia, because of its size, was the mother State of Presidents. Later, Ohio, with its heavy population, boasted that it was the well-spring of Presidents, while New York has also supplied a heavy quota.

The weight of population is important because of the number of delegates a State can control in the nominating conventions. And this year, California comes forward with the second largest population in the United States of America.

Also important is the fact that if a miracle should happen and Jimmy Roosevelt should be able to defeat a Republican of Governor Warren's prestige and standing, he would be definite presidential timber four years later.

On the other hand, if Warren defeats Jimmy Roosevelt, as now seems likely, his three terms as Governor of California, plus certain other qualities, will make it hard for the party bosses to ignore him in 1952—much as they would like to.

Toughest Opponent

Real fact is that when Jimmy Roosevelt picked Earl Warren as his opponent in his first big bid for public office, he picked about the toughest man to run against in the entire United States of America—for two reasons:

1. Warren has been an A-1 Governor of a State that is hard to govern.

2. Warren has put into practice, in reverse, the sage advice of Jimmy's father, who when running for President in the pro-Republican days of 1932, told his brain trust: "The only way we can win is to wean away a chunk of Republican votes."

That was when the Republicans had a big majority of the registered voters. Now with a preponderance of Democratic voters, Warren reverses FDR's technique and weans away the Democrats.

How successful he has been is illustrated by his first race for Governor in 1942 when 400,000 Democrats voted for Warren. In his second race, 1946, he was so strong with the Democrats that they nominated him on their ticket, too.

Doubtless Warren would have received the Democratic nomination again this year also, had it not been for Jimmy Roosevelt. And this in itself is a tribute to the indefatigable vigor of the youthful Jimmy.

A little over a year ago I discussed with Governor Warren his political future. He seemed discouraged and somewhat uncertain. Scores of Republican leaders in California were down on him, claimed he was more a Democrat than a Republican, and there was open talk that Lieut. Gov. Goodwin Knight would run against him in the GOP primaries.

I have always remembered one remark Warren made at that time, "If a job is worth doing," he said, "it is worth fighting for, even if you lose."

At that time, Republican reactionaries were so opposed to Warren that I think he expected to lose. Today the tide is just the opposite. Warren is riding the crest of the wave and is a certain victor.

Warren has become that favorite chiefly by applying a rigid sense of fair play to government. Some time ago, Judge William Denman of San Francisco, chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals, telephoned Warren to ask the political affiliation of 10 State judges the Governor had appointed over a period of years.

The Governor appeared slightly irritated. "I don't know what political party they belong to," he replied.

Judge Denman, who believes, as Warren does, that a judge should not be picked because of politics, later looked up the political backgrounds of the 10 California judges. He found that Warren had appointed five Republicans and five Democrats.

Political Courage

In more than one respect Jimmy Roosevelt's political aspirations are suffering from the fact that Governor Warren has taken a leaf from Jimmy's father's book. For instance, Warren has appointed a Negro, Walter Gordon, as head of the California Parole Board—an appointee who has won the respect and confidence of everyone.

Warren has also gone further than any other State in working out old-age pensions; and put forward a health program of his own which, while not going as far as that proposed in Washington, at least went far enough to stir California doctors into a lather against him.

Finally, Warren had the courage to take a firm stand against the witch-hunters on the board of regents of the University of California when they demanded a faculty loyalty oath that would delve back into the entire political life of every professor. Though his stand was unpopular, Warren opposed his Republican friends on the board of regents and sided with the faculty.

This inspired some off-the-record remarks by another prominent personage who may find himself competing with Warren for the GOP nomination in 1952—General Eisenhower.

Ike was being wined and dined in San Francisco some months ago and delivered two off-the record talks before the San Francisco press club and the Bohemian club, during which he took an indirect crack at Governor Warren by saying that he didn't know of any loyalty oath that he wouldn't be willing to stand up and swear to.

Naturally, the remark got back to Warren.

"It is interesting," commented the Governor to a friend, "that the general made his remark off-the-record so it would not be quoted in the East. For he and president Conant of Harvard were the first to take a public stand against loyalty oaths.

"Furthermore," continued Warren, "it happens that the university Ike heads has more Communists and Reds than any other in the country."
